

Adde. MSS. 2/38

Lucas's Palace May 10th 1654
— 12 Pk

The King so thoroughly enters into the propriety of a provision being made for the Widow and Family of the late Lord Albemarle Kilwarden that He has instantly signed it; within a Day or two His Majesty trusts He shall call on Mr. Secretary Gorges to carry a Message to the House of Commons and transmit one to the House of Lords for the same provision on Mr. Addington as has been given to former Speakers of the House, and no one of His Indulgences have a greater claim to the liberality of that House or to the warmest recommendation from the Crown. His word that morning has been every way dignified and affectionate

George

James, Duke of York
25th Nov 1701

The King is thought to be very satisfied with the Bill as far as the late Act. Concerning the succession of the Crown; within which is contained the Act concerning the Bill as far as the Succession of the Crown is concerned. The King is thought to be very satisfied with the Bill as far as the Succession of the Crown is concerned. The King is thought to be very satisfied with the Bill as far as the Succession of the Crown is concerned.

James
Duke of York
