November 20th 1817.

My Lord,

I trust your Lordship will pardon the liberty of my address - particularly as I am a stranger to you, and probably unknown - You will find with this a plain sermon, on the much lamented Death of the late amiable and worthy Princess Charlotte, which was preached last night, at the Parish Church. - Having been earnestly solicited to publish it - I could not consent to this, before I had submitted the Manuscript to the perusal of your Lordship. - Yesterday was observed here, by a suspension from all Business, and the greatest decorum and solemnity prevailed. - We had Services at both Churches in the Town, as well as at the Chapels in my Parish - The Pulpits are all covered with black, and at Night, more than 7000 People, were at the Church, so universally was the Day kept sacred -

Hoping that your Lordship will (when the sermon is returned) favour me with an opinion on the subject - and praying that the liberty which has now been taken may be forgiven.
