Sir,

I return You my Sincerest Thanks, for the trouble
You have taken amidst all Your hurry, to inform me Yourself of Your safe arrival at New. I do assure You this Kindness is most gratefully felt by me & I trust I shall ever deserve the continuation of Your goodness. I am sorry that the Dafe of Your's ^{first} letter is to announce a Reverse of Fortune but thank God He is well & Safe, & I trust that with His Zeal, added to that of The Troops under His Command
He may soon be enabled to make us forget this blow by sending us an account of a Complete Victory over the enemy.
This is at least the Sincere wish of an anxious Mother, & I am proudly certain of the whole Nation.

Our party went exceedingly well last Night, little Charlotte did the Honors of Her House Capitally well, at eight I saw Her Undressed & then we played at Cards, at

& at Ten we had a very elegant Supper for all the ladies entirely directed & executed by Her own Woman Cook were at home by Eleven. The weather continues very fine, I took a walk of three miles Yesterday Morning & intend doing the same to Day at James, to which Place Sophia & Amelia are to go on Horseback, & we are to return by five to be ready for Quicks entertainment, & as Mr Hughes insists upon the poor Penleys staying to morrow for their Benefit I have promised to go & manage all the interest Leon to make others do the same.

I have the Satisfaction to say that every body is well, & that every Inhabitant wishes for Your return.
 I think the House very Dull, without You, & enjoy the thoughts of seeing You on Fryday.

The Dullness of this Place will not permit me to
