Sir

your goodness in writing so often makes me quite happy, indeed if I may say so I am not unworthy of your condescension & affection which you honour me with, as no sister can love a brother more than I do you but I dare not enter into a variance on a subject that is so malancoly.

The Duke is all one can wish, he is like my Uncle, only a great deal more manner, I am charmed with him, the P of O is very sensible & tries to inform himself of all that passes in poor old England, he talks of your Majesty as all must do that have the pleasure of knowing you, Monsieur Keiden is d'une éfronterie that surpases all, when we met des Equipages of the P of O, M. R. placed himself in the coach with me, I look'd at Lady Susan & she at me but to be fair I felt as one does in a dream but let happen what will of this sort I'll never say a word but leave all to my dear Prince who thinks of every thing that can be agreeable to me, & also what would be approved of at St James, I remain your most dutiful Subject & affectionate Sister Augusta pray dont be angry with M. R. nor dont let him know that any body has wrote you word of his facons.
