Dear brother

Excuse my troubling you again about Bristol, but I fear some black designs by Jersey have every week the poor Princeps said, & her whole thrust is to hurt her in your opinion & the Queen all the Princeps wishes is to be conducted by you & the Queen, for you know dear brother that the Innocent one is & the easier one falls into Surges, the Po has told her that he has taken his part & that he will not constrain her in nothing, that she may live with who she pleases & as she is fit to d out of her senses. What this woman can mean, for the Prince has been too condescending. but the Prince made it apoint that she should treat her with distinction & indeed she has not obeyed blindly all his whims, even to her prejudice, she is very sensible of your kindness to her. H. R. H. left her in the Country without even taking leave of her, or saying that he was going, all this still may end well, if she has prudence ^{enough} to continue to do her duty, & never to let herself be put out of temper, for every sort of insult she must expect from P. J. Jersey. but being prepared she may ^{not} appear to see it, so continue civil to her by this means this will defeat all her vile purposes. The Prince's reasons are but weak & I fear that with this ^{affection it} will shake them very much when she saying if she is not kept very quiet, lay me at The Queens feet & beg of her to be indulgent to the dear dear Prince for with ^{out} you & the Queen I should despair. my gratitude & affection is bound up for the care you take of this dear Prince & ever am my dear est brother
