of Ministry of France not surprised at Amherst's success. Those of them who wish for peace look on this as fortunate; Belleisle says of Martinis will also be lost if peace is not soon made; of France's alliances are very unnatural, & of this success will be her ruin.

Choiseul & M^r de Pompadour are hurt to of greatest degree with the loss of Canada; Martinis not in a state to hold out if attacked; of they fear most of all of loss of Pondicherry all of Ministry except Choiseul cry out for peace, nay any peace rather than a grand victory of House of Austria.

Prussia proposes of Prussians should winter in Pomerania, whilst her troops, those of of Empire & of Wurtemberg remain in Saxony; M^r de Castries who behaved well at Campen is a great friend of M. Belleisle.

Proflie has wrote to J. Dauphin of the command of Court of St. Germain, & will lay down of Command of of Gen. returns to of Army.

M^r Belleisle will ruin Proflie when of Campen ends, Maillebois, St. Germain, & Chevert are talked of to succeed him.

of of troops are so quartered of 100,000 Men may be assembled in any part of of the main & back
