

TLCD/16/12/62

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent, that during yesterday there was less irritation in his Majesty than there has lately been, and that his uneasiness about arranging his Papers has ceased - Once or twice however in the course of yesterday there was a slight reference to the usual error - His Majesty has slept last night five hours and a half, and this morning his manner is mild, and his conversation as good as usual -

Windsor Castle
May 1 - 1811

MED/16/2/63

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-ing the Prince-Regent, that his Majesty passed yesterday much in the same manner as the day before - He has ceased to arrange his papers, but his conversations with the Royal Family have been too full of plans, and some times a little trifling -

His Majesty slept three hours, <sup>three</sup> quarters last night, and is this morn-ing as well as usual -

Thursday May 2 - 1811
Windsor Castle

MED/16/2/64

D<sup>r</sup> Rob<sup>t</sup> Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that His Majesty passed the whole of yesterday in a satisfactory manner. The King's conduct and conversation were calm and temperate, equally free from impatience and from triflingness.

His Majesty slept five hours and three quarters during the night and, when awake, betrayed none of the usual marks of nervousness. His Majesty is this morning, in all respects, as well as He was yesterday.

Windsor Castle

May 3. 1811.

5

2084

May 4

MSD/16/2/65

Sir

I have not yet had an opportunity of judging so fully of His Majesty's state from my own observation as I shall have at the end of another twenty four hours. His Majesty has appeared to me to be good natured and composed. I think His conversation has been on more trifling subjects than our court wish to hear it, but there has not appeared any imitation since I have been at Windsor, nor have I heard that any delusion has been expressed palpably and decidedly - but there have been a great many arrangements and plans some of which, probably, have a reference to the familiar error.

The thing has slept between him and six hours, and there has been no adjustment of the bed clothes - but it should be remarked that His Majesty has got up as soon as he awoke both yesterday and day - even as early as at five o'clock in the morning.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, Your Royal Highness's most humble faithful Servant

Henry Hatford

May 4th 1811. -

May 6. 1811

MED 11612166

Sir

The most striking feature of the Queen's visit in the evening yesterday was the cool and determined manner in which the King expressed his resentment against the Queen's Council - saving Her Majesty from all possible reproach at the same time by a most delicate and gentle compliment. The King passed the rest of the evening mildly and appeared quite tired and sleepy before ten o'clock - His Majesty has slept nearly six hours, but was occupied in adjusting the bed clothes for a short time and arose at five o'clock - he has no reason whatever to be dissatisfied with His Majesty's conversation this morning. but his occupation amongst his cabinets seems more trifling than one could wish it to be.

I believe there has been no reference to the familiar delusion since your Royal Highness left London.

I have the honor to be Sir, Your Royal Highness' faithful servant

Henry Hatford
Windsor Castle - May 6th.

I thought the Princess Mary so unwell last night as to be unequal to write without distressing herself.

Windsor Castle May 7th

Sir,

I have the honor to inform your Royal Highness that His Majesty slept last night six hours, & that his Page, who was in the room, considered it as the best night he had witnessed. There was very little to characterize the last day. His Majesty has appeared generally mild & good humoured, but liable to momentary irritation upon very slight occasions. His conversation & manner yesterday evening and this morning have been little objectionable.

I have the honor to be your Royal Highness's
most obedient

Humble servant

W. Herdren

RED/16/2/68

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent that His Majesty pass'd yesterday very much in the same manner as he has done some preceding days - His Majesty's conversation has sometimes been good, sometimes trifling, and sometimes mix'd with considerable imitation - It appears that yesterday His Majesty had express'd himself in a way that is at least closely allied to his ordinary behaviour, but Dr B. has not learnt that any thing of this kind occurred this morning - His Majesty slept last night between Four & Five hours —

Windsor Castle
May 10 - 1811

BOOKS BY THE
C. 106

MED | 16 | 2 | 69

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that his Majesty's conversation with the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Aylesford was yesterday highly satisfactory - His Majesty's conversation too in the Evening with Col<sup>l</sup> Taylor and two of his Physicians was in every respect unexceptionable - Still however in the course of the day there was a slight reference to his more ordinary delusion & to Hanover -

His Majesty slept last night fully six hours, but has spoken this morning a good deal about Weymouth & has referred to his common error - His Majesty's conversation this morning with Dr Willis & Dr Baillie was in every respect proper -

Windsor Castle
May 9 - 1811

WED 16/2/70

Dr. Robt. Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that His Majesty's manner was far from satisfactory thro' the greater part of yesterday. His Majesty was occasionally irritable, and His conversation consisted principally of plans and arrangements, which were detailed with a minuteness that was quite distressing. In some parts of the day, however, His Majesty conversed correctly and properly. Towards evening His Majesty became composed: He played at Backgammon for an hour, and His conversation was in all respects unexceptionable.

His Majesty slept about five hours in the course of the night, and has hitherto shewn no marks of hurry or of irritability. Windsor Castle - May 10. 1811.

1802

May 11. 1811

MED|16|2|71

Sir

It was stated to me on my arrival at Windsor yesterday from all quarters that His Majesty had passed a good day - and was more composed than he had been in any day in the week - Dr Willis took an opportunity of representing to His Majesty in the course of the afternoon the grounds on which the Physicians and the Queen's Council considered the King as still ill - and we expected therefore a greater degree of excitement in the evening than we found - His Majesty discovered occasionally signs of an improvement made upon his mind by Dr Willis's conversation but his manners was good on the whole, and the subjects of his conversation were acceptable —

The King has slept about five hours and a half, and did not rise quite so early this morning. He has expressed every now and then some resentment against the Queen's Council, but in our intercourse, at the usual visit this day, we were satisfied with the King's deportment and discourse.

I am, Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's

faithful servant

Windsor Castle

May 11. 1711.

Henry Walpole

May 13. 1811

MED/16/2/72

Sir

We had occasion to notice a great degree of irritability and impatience in His Majesty in the course of the evening yesterday - and yet the crisis of the Queen and Princesses went off satisfactorily - The King's conversation with the Physicians in the evening referred to the subject of His Majesty's illness - and we have often had occasion to remark that he chafes this when his mind is vexed and fretted - In the short time greater part of the day was characterized by impatience and excitement - but I cannot find that any allusion was discovered to His Majesty's favorite errors. The King slept five hours in the course of the night - and manifested the usual signs of nervousness this morning for some time before he arose - which was soon after five o'clock -

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's Faithful humble
servant

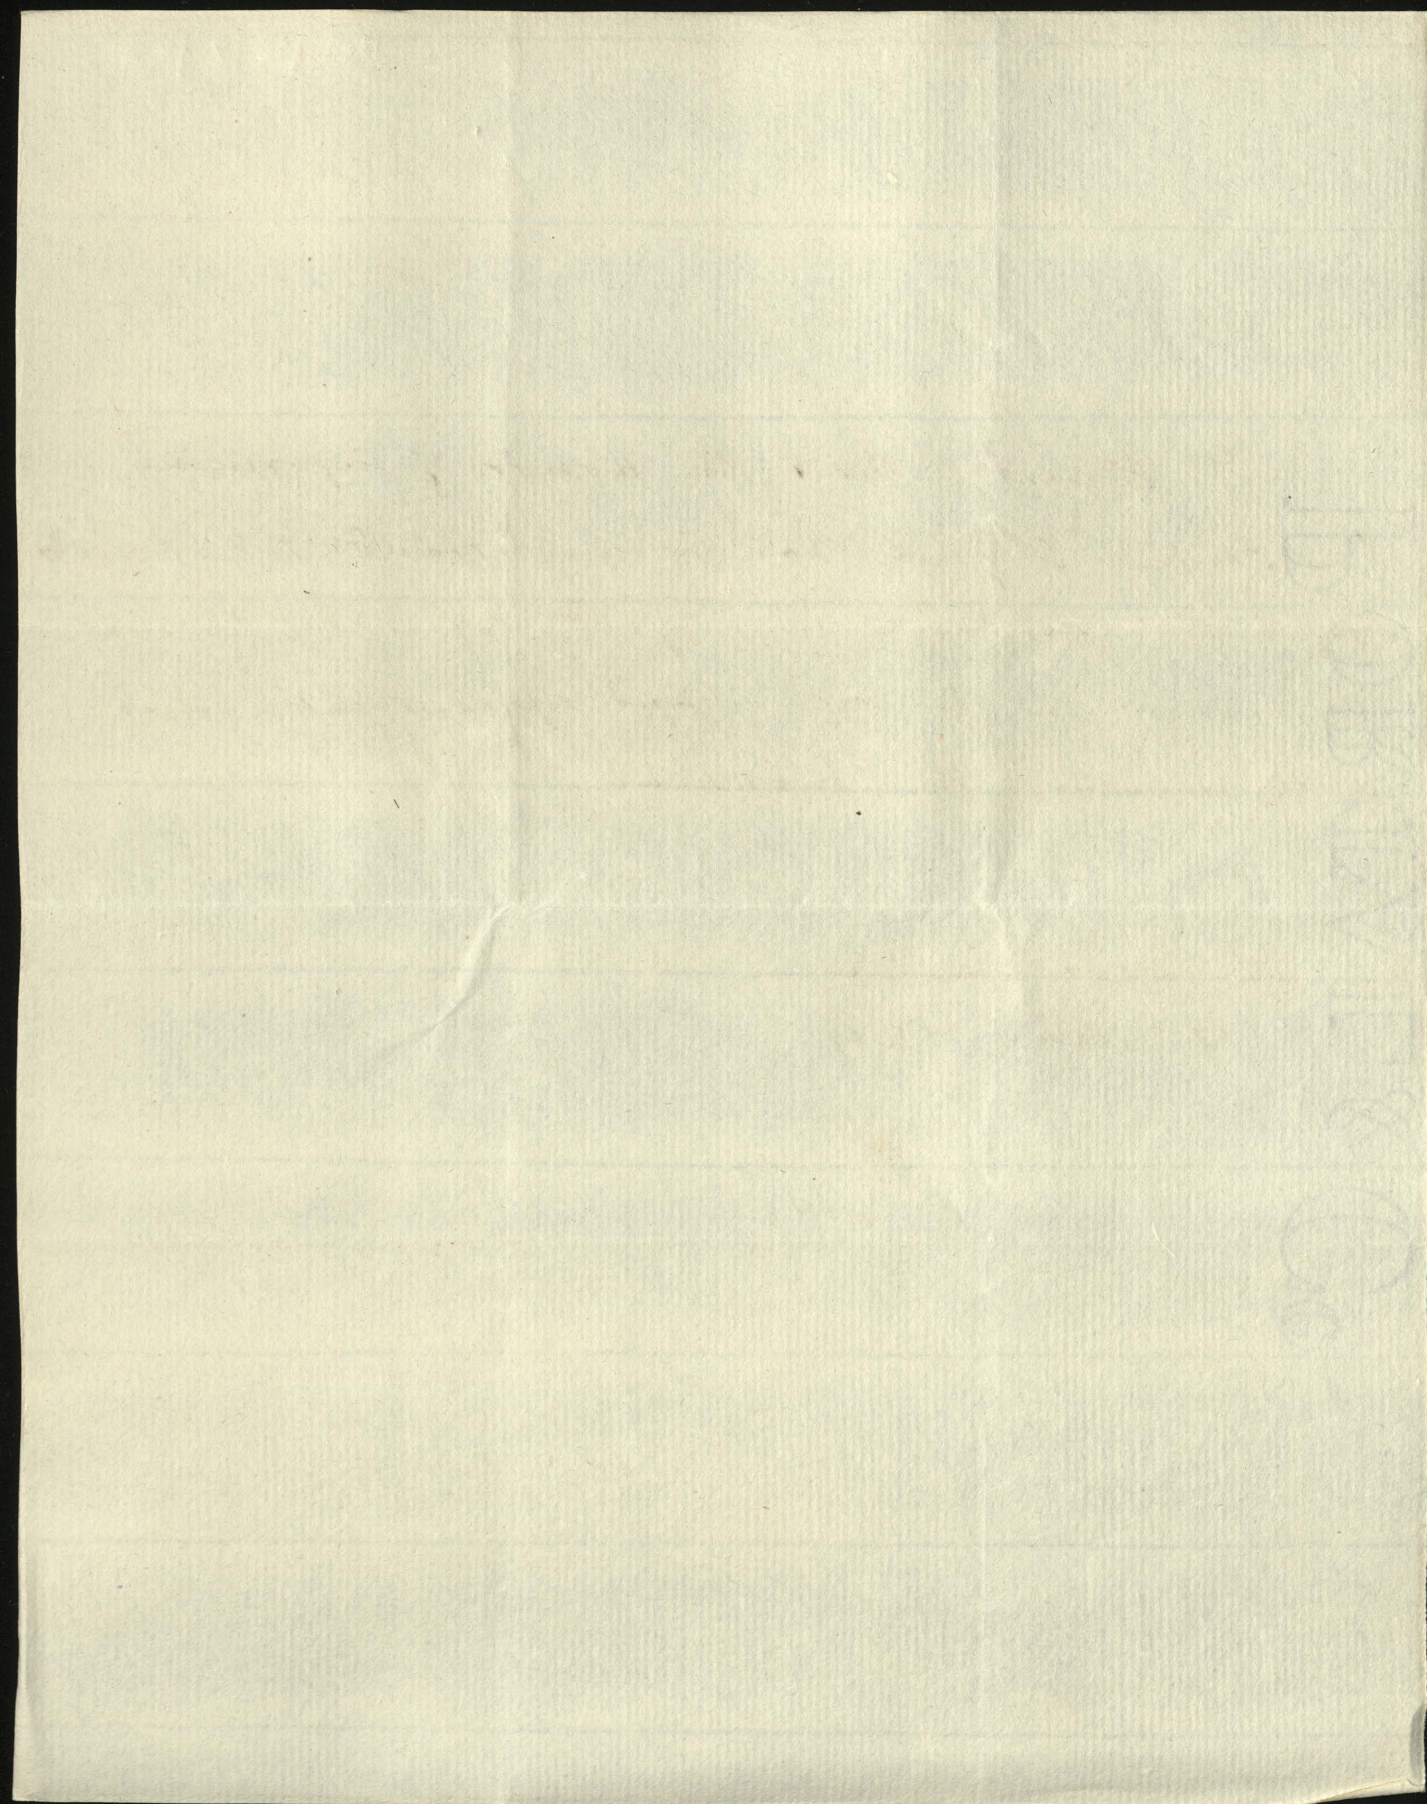

Henry Hallford

Windsor Castle - May 13. 1841

MED/16/2/73

Dr Herberden has the honor of informing The Prince Regent, that he understands His Majesty passed the last day in a good manner. He slept five hours in the night, and appears calm and good humoured this morning -

Windsor Castle
14 May 1811

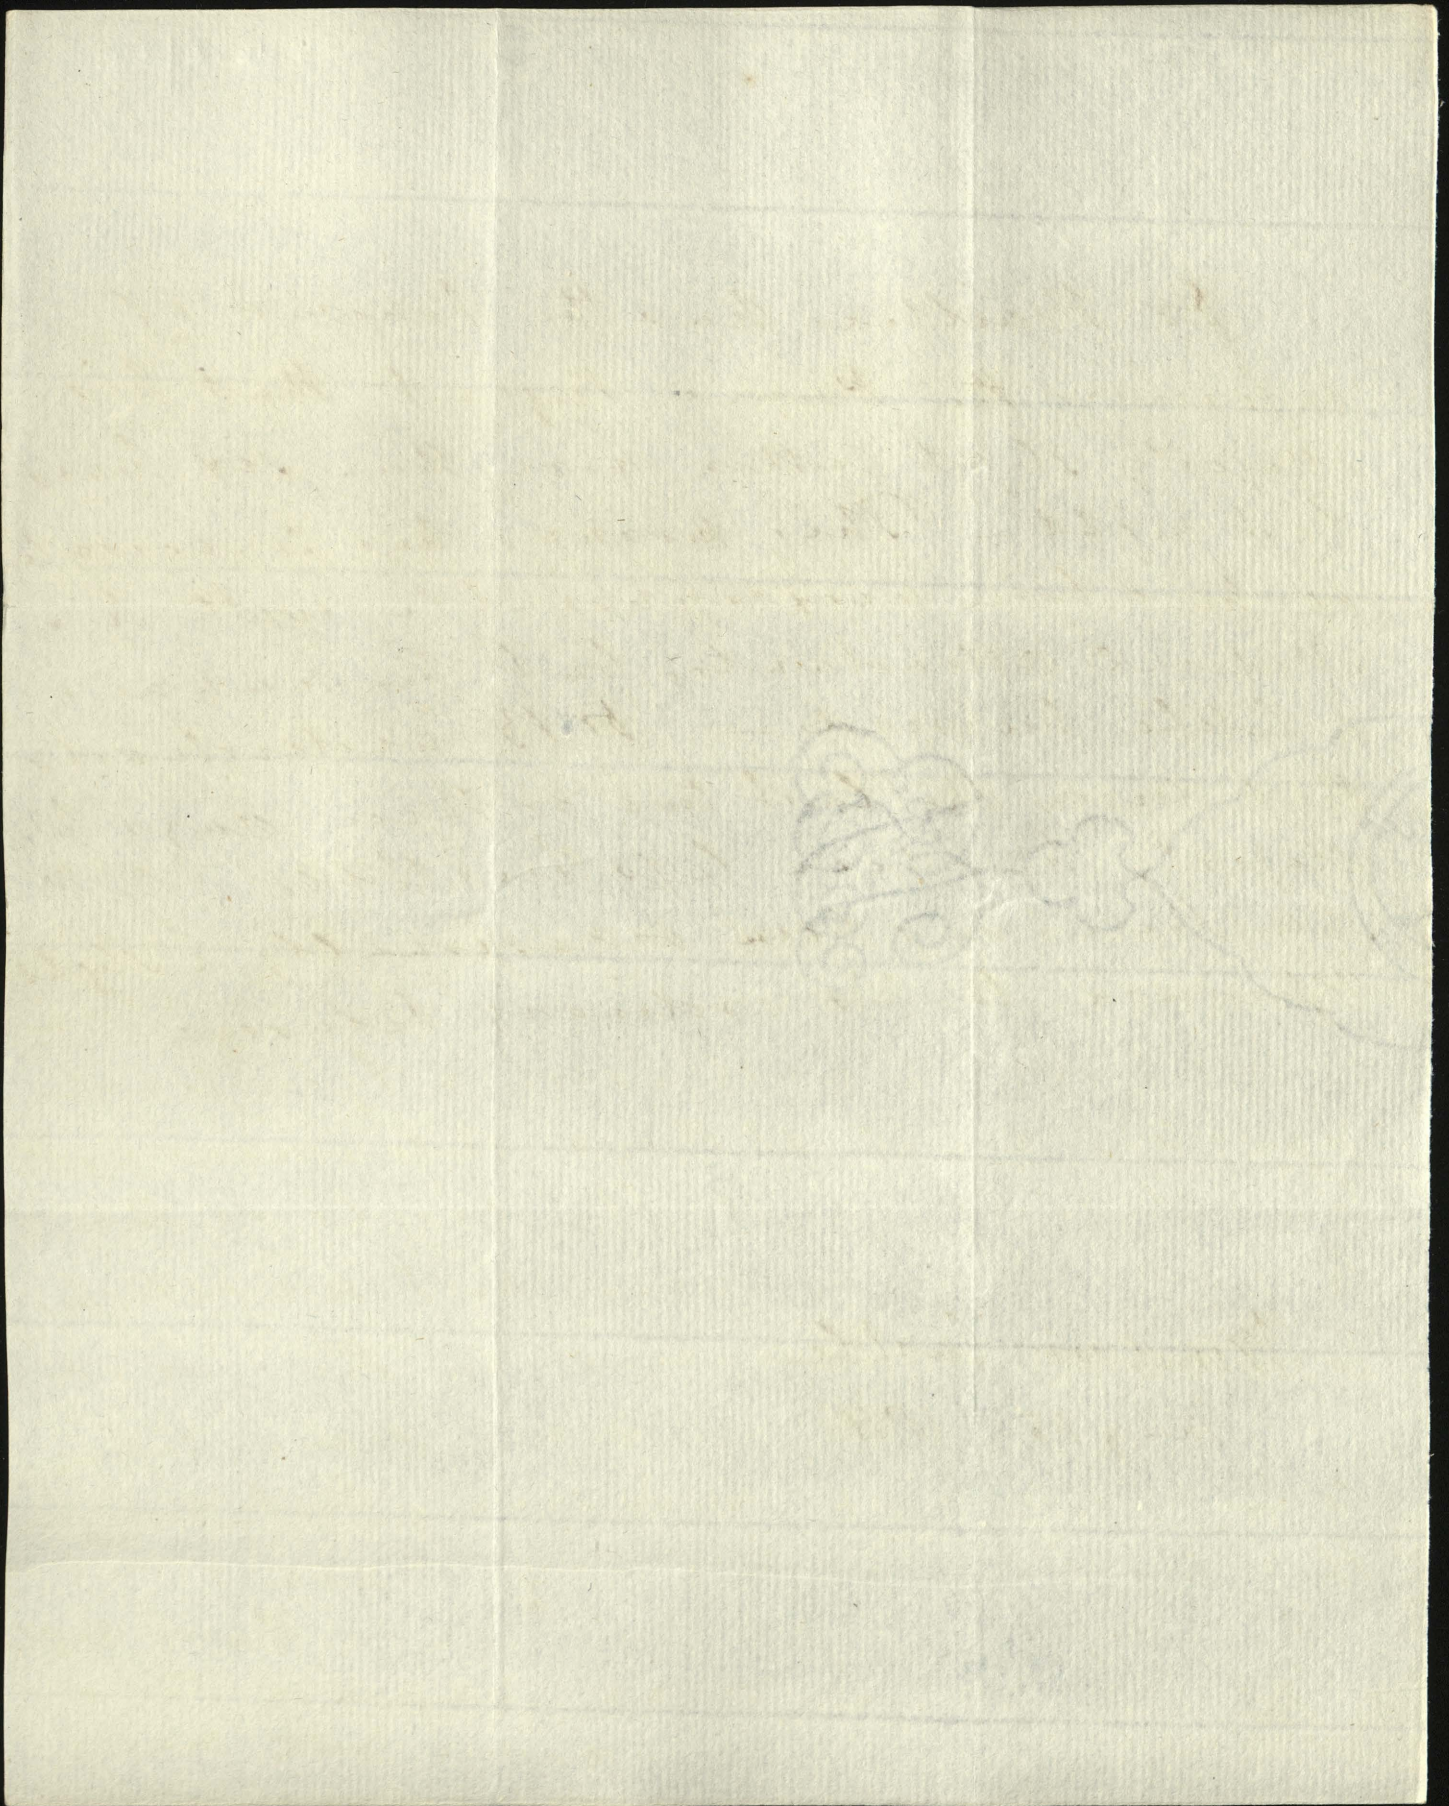

MED/16/2/74

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent that his Majesty slept rather more than six hours last night - This morning his conversation has been unexceptionable with his Medical attendants, but his manner a little hurried - Dr B: understands that during the last two or three days his Majesty has been less irritable, but still there has been occasionally a slight reference to his ordinary delusion -

Windsor Castle
May 15 - 1811.

MED/16/2/75

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that during yesterday His Majesty's manner was a little more irritable than it had been for the two or three preceding days - His conversation however with his medical attendants in every part of the day was unexceptionable, and was particularly good in the evening - The Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Aylesford reported well of their interview with His Majesty, and the visits of the Royal Family were not unsatisfactory - Still however in the course of yesterday there was some reference to the common delusion, but none this morning as far as is known -

His Majesty slept five hours last night & his manner is more compos'd this morning -

Windsor Castle May 16
1811

1808

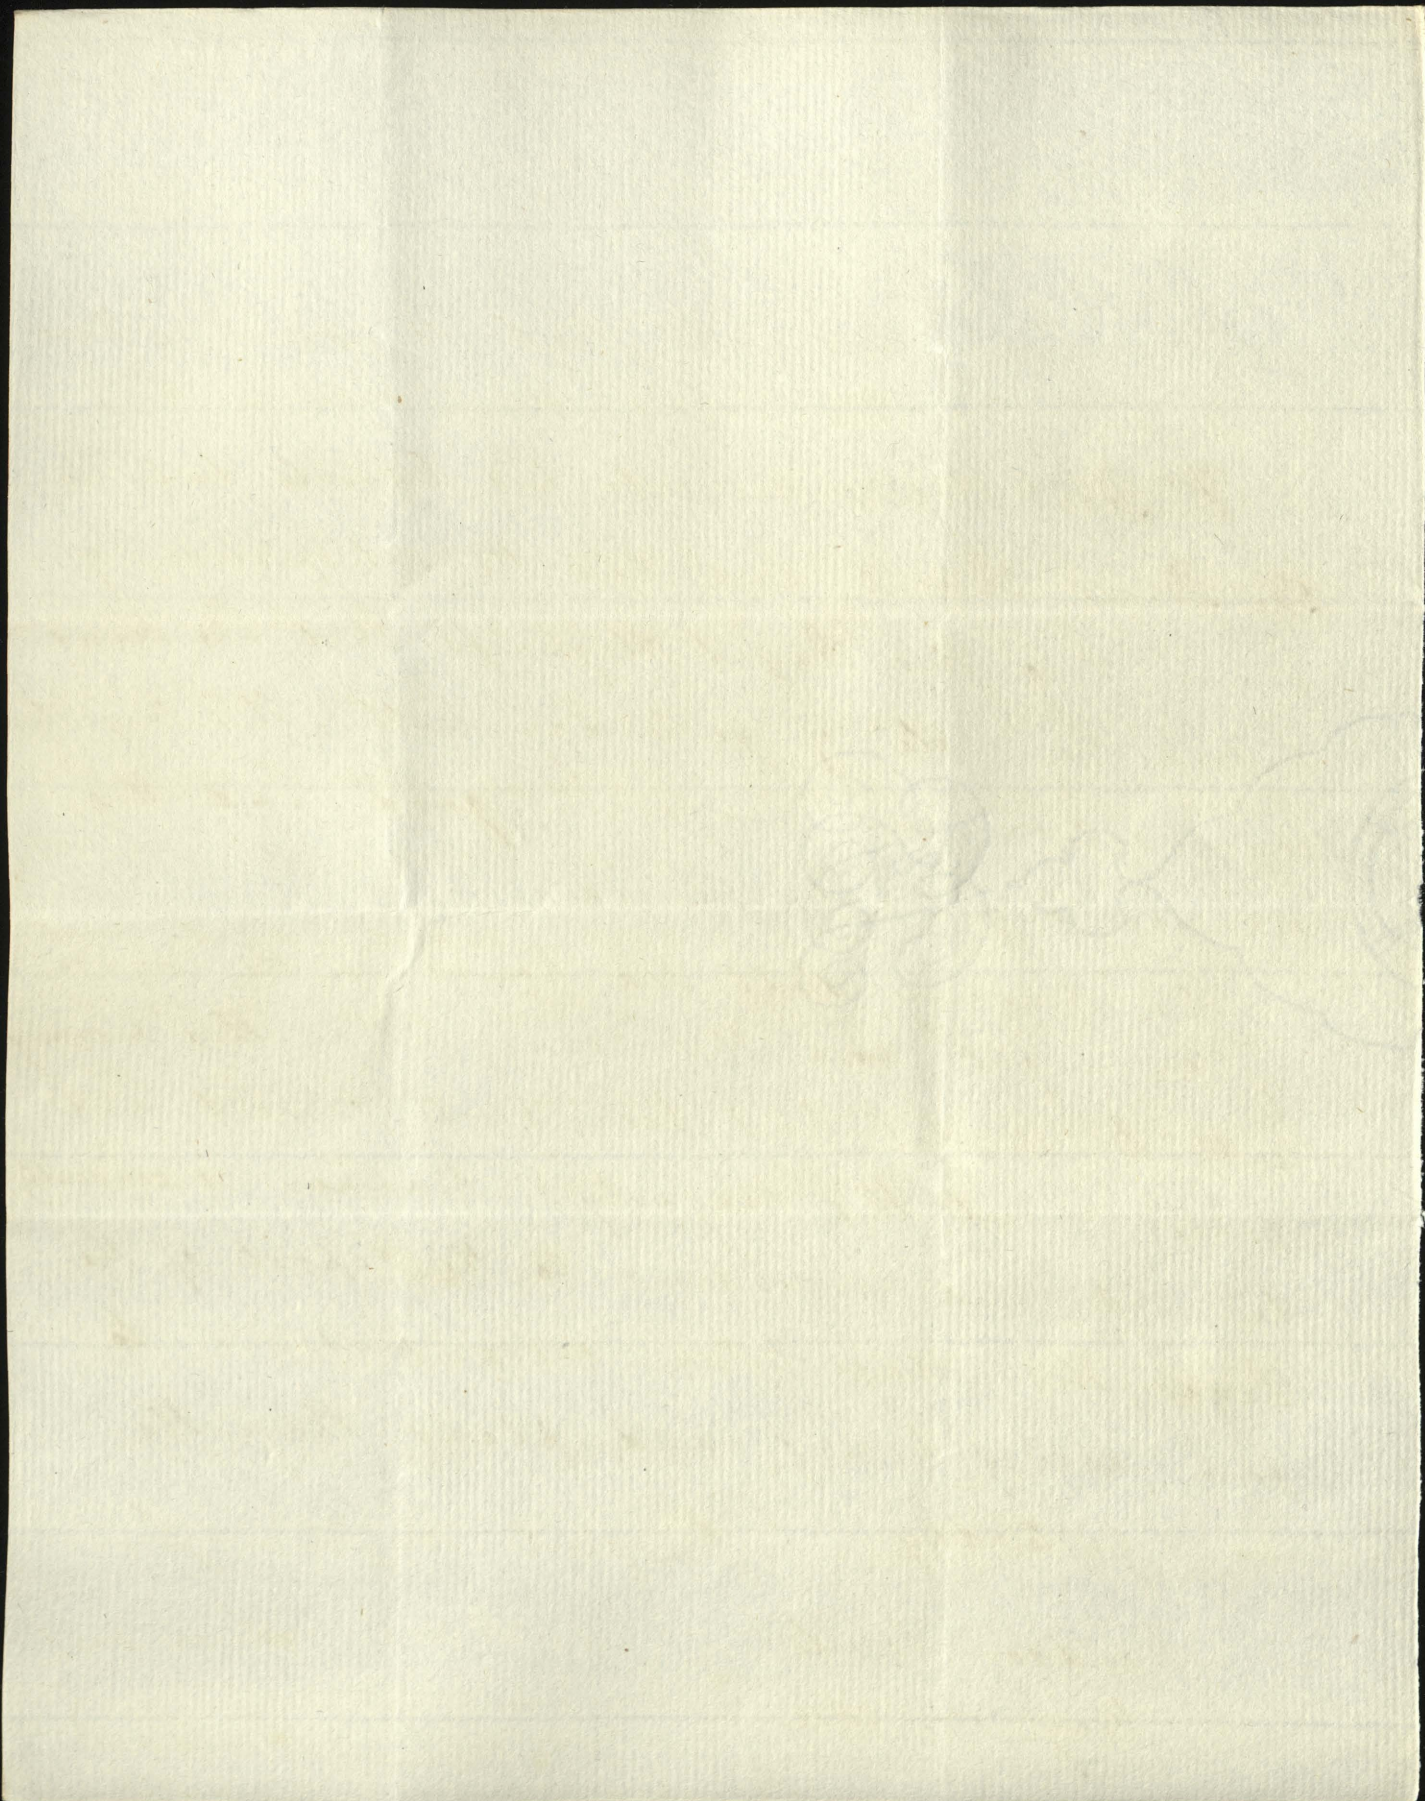

MEG/16/2/76

Dr. Rob<sup>t</sup> Willis presents his humble duty to The Prince Regent and has the satisfaction of acquainting His Royal Highness that The King passed the whole of yesterday well. His Majesty's conversation was uniformly good and His manner peculiarly placid.

His Majesty slept six hours in the course of the night, and His conversation this morning with Dr. Willis has been quite correct and proper; but His Majesty's manner is evidently hurried, and, according to the report of the Pages, His Majesty is more disposed to form new schemes and plans than He was yesterday.

Windsor Castle

May 17. 1811.

REC'D 16/2/77

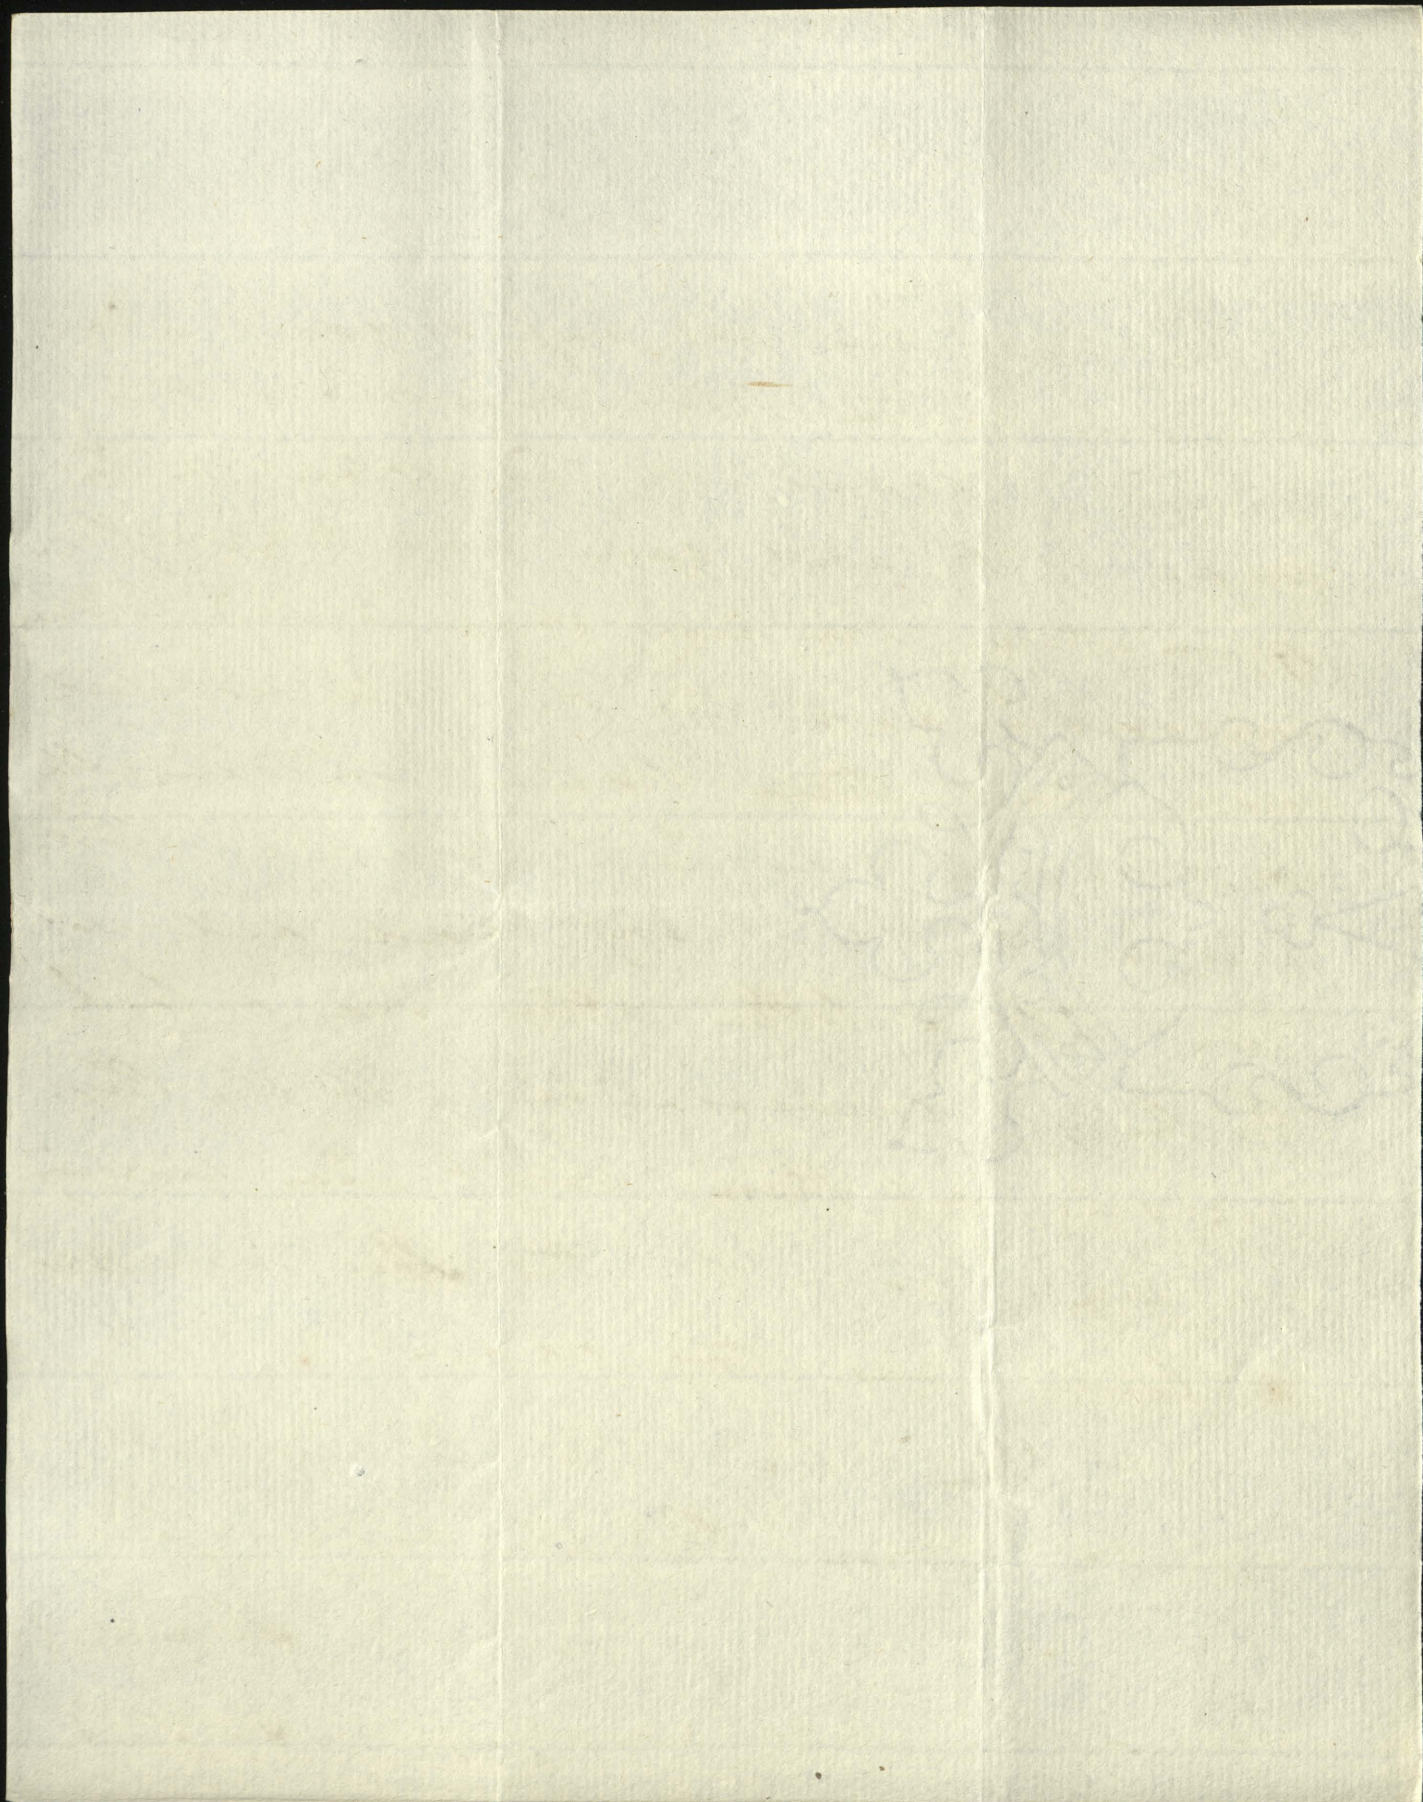

Sir

The King did not pass so good a day yesterday as the preceding one - His Majesty appeared hurried often in the course of it, and gave way to expressions of irritation. The King went to bed, however, composedly, and tho' He did not sleep more than three hours continually, His Majesty has had several short sleeps this morning, and did not rise till a little after six o'clock. The King's conversation with the Physicians at their visit this morning was unexceptionable, tho' His Majesty at first was too eager.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect,
Your Royal Highness's
Faithful Servant.

Windsor Castle. May 10th 1811.

Henry Hallford

May 20. 1811

REC/16/2/78

Sir

The character of the evening which His Majesty passed after your Royal Highness left Windsor was marked by the same traits which you observed during your Royal Highness's visit. The King's conversation was frequently trivial, tho' it was remarkable occasionally that His Majesty made observations indicative of clearness and discernment which he possesses in a state of mental health - he learned, after His Majesty was gone to bed, that he had referred frequently to the Lady - tho' with a marked caution and a disposition to great misceability even forsook him throughout the day - The King slept about five hours and a painter - and His Manner & the Physicians this morning His still humored in good humour - The King has expressed considerable satisfaction with the thoughts of riding a kind of exercise which the business swelling of His Majesty's legs renders preferable to much walking.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect your Royal Highness
Faithful servant

Henry Hallford

REC'D 16/2/79

May 20, 1811

Sir

I believe I have nothing to add, of importance, to my communication to the Prince Ducal of this morning, thro' the pleasure of appearing your Royal Highness of my most respectful attachment induces me to write - Soon after my letter was sent, the King prepared to ride - but His Majesty could not get his ordinary boots on, on account of the swelling of his legs - The King sent therefore for a pair of large Military Boots - and having made his visit to the Queen for half an hour He mounted his Horse -

This done, I

Left Windsor -

I might add in continuation of my report, that a good deal has been said this morning about Hannover, and an intention of purchase of many servants & horses there -

I am, Sir, with high
respect your Royal Highness
Faithful servant

Henry Hatfield

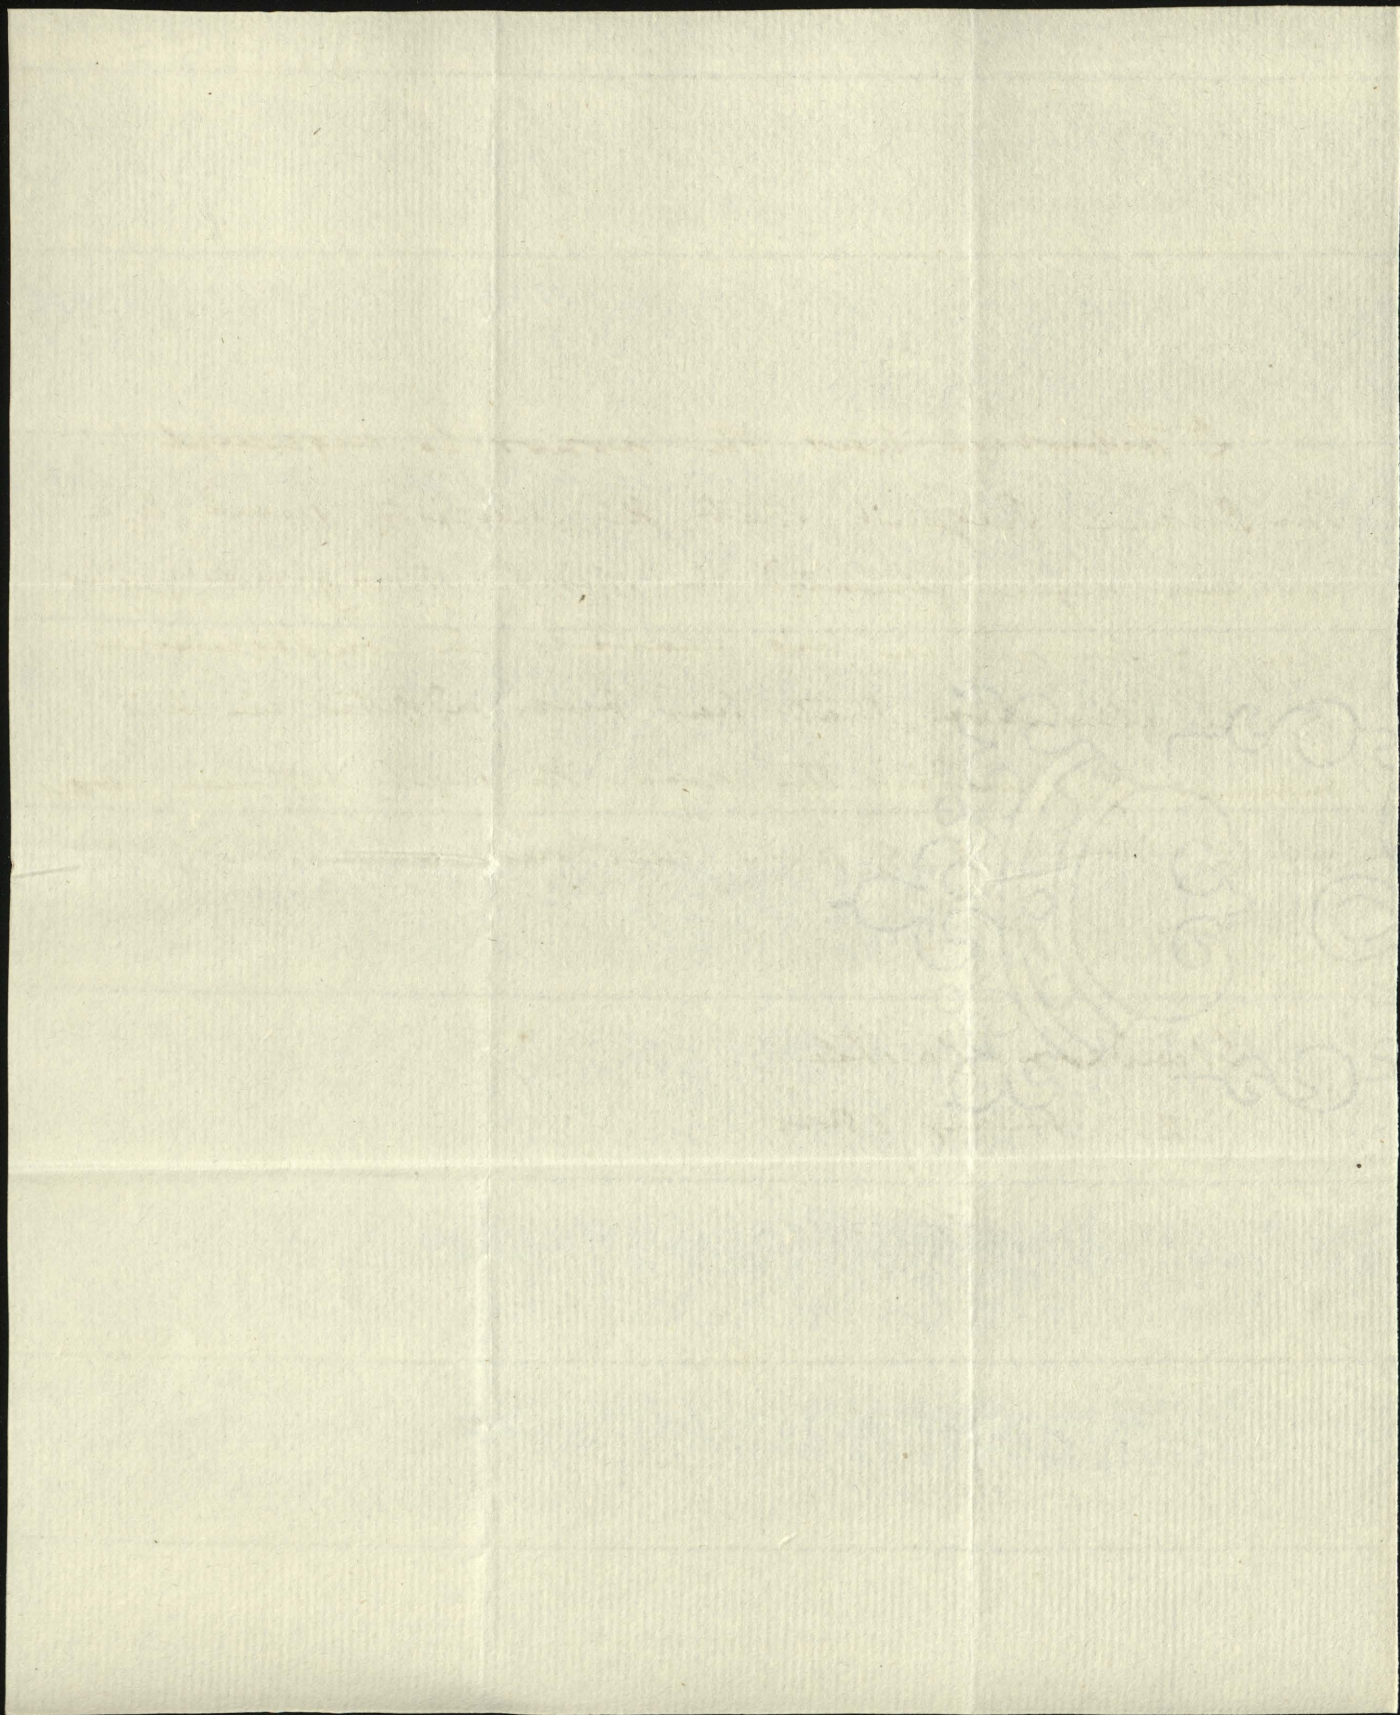

May 20. 1811.
5 o'clock P.M.

MED/16/2/80

Mr Kebleton has the honor to acquaint The Prince Regent that his Majesty seemed to a certain degree elevated in spirits throughout yester-day, & hurried in his manner, in consequence of the altercation that had been adopted in his manner of spending the day. He slept between four & five hours, & appears this morning nearly in his usual state.

Windsor Castle

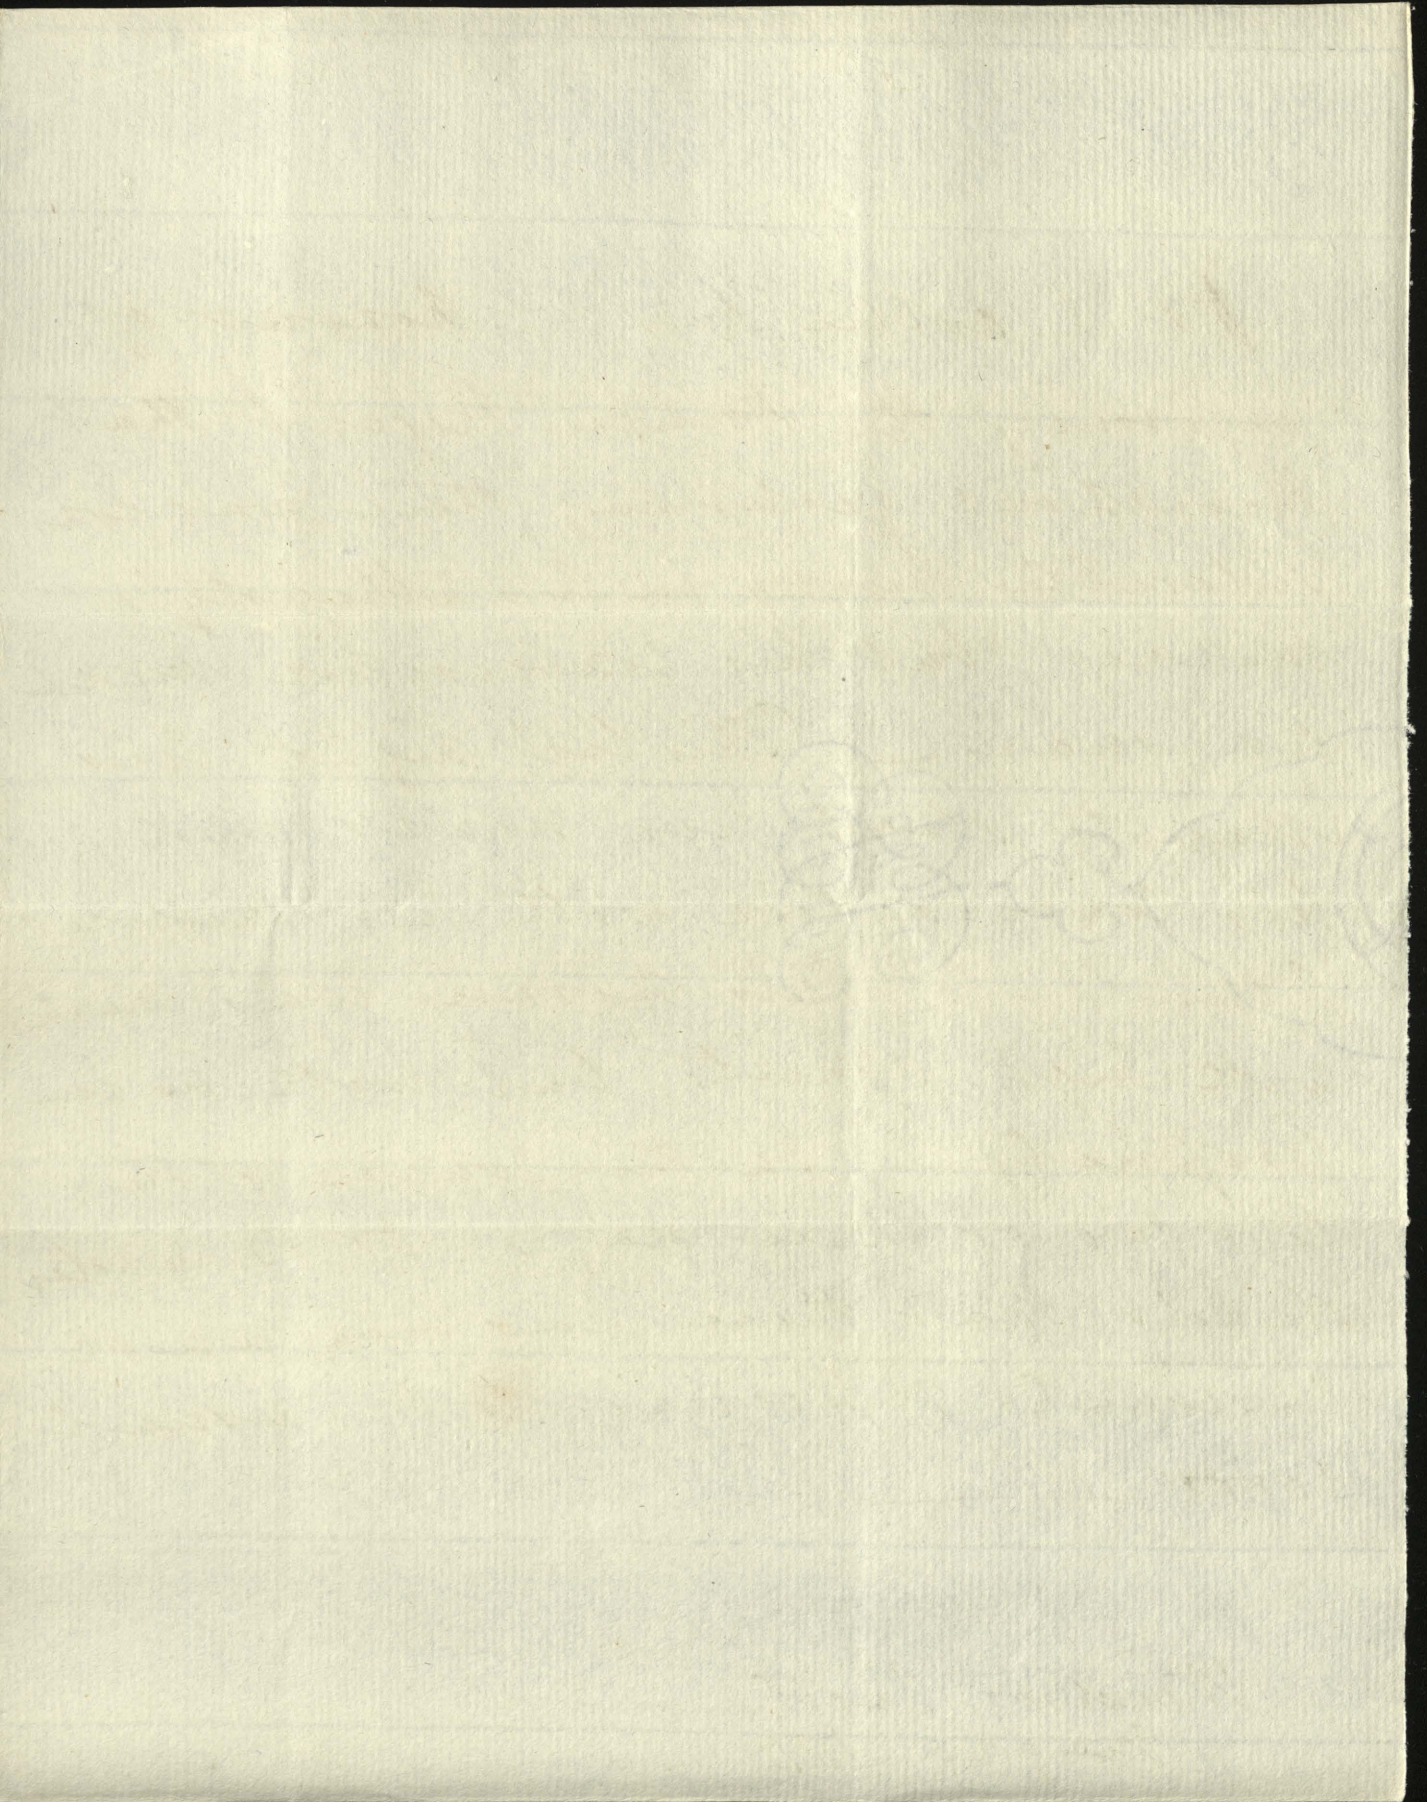

21 May 1822

TUE 16/2/81

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent that throughout yesterday there was considerable hurry in his Majesty's manner, but his conversation much as usual — This last night his Majesty slept five hours, and his conversation with his Medical Attendants this morning was marked with high spirits, but with no impropriety — In the course of the last two or three days Dr B. understands that there has been an occasional reference to the usual error —

Windsor Castle
May 22 - 1811

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-ing the Prince-Regent that throughout yesterday his Majesty's manner was more hurried than usual, and his Spirits too high - Towards the evening He was for sometime irascible - In the course of the yesterday His Majesty is reported to have referred both to Hanover and to his usual error -

Last night His Majesty slept nearly five hours, and his manner is somewhat more compos'd, <sup>this morning</sup> than it was yesterday -

Windsor Castle
May 23 - 1811

8
0 8 14

MED/16/2/83

Dr Robt Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that The King exhibited a considerable degree of eagerness in this manner yesterday; tho', upon the whole, His Majesty passed the day better and more composedly than He had passed the preceding day.

His Majesty slept nearly six hours in the course of the night. His manner and conversation this morning are very much the same as they were yesterday.

Windsor Castle
May 24. 1811.

8081

MEO/16/2/84

Windsor Castle May
25th 1811.

Sir

His Majesty's conversation and manner have not had that uniformity of steadiness which we earnestly wish to observe - The slightest occasions have created great excitement, and we have seen the King's deportment sometimes wholly without dignity.
His Majesty has attended frequently too to the Lady - and has frequently talked about Hanover with a less correct sense of the state of affairs there than the nature of things requires. He slept nearly six hours last night, and the legs appear less swollen since the King rode. I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's
faithful servant
Henry Dalford

May 27. 1811

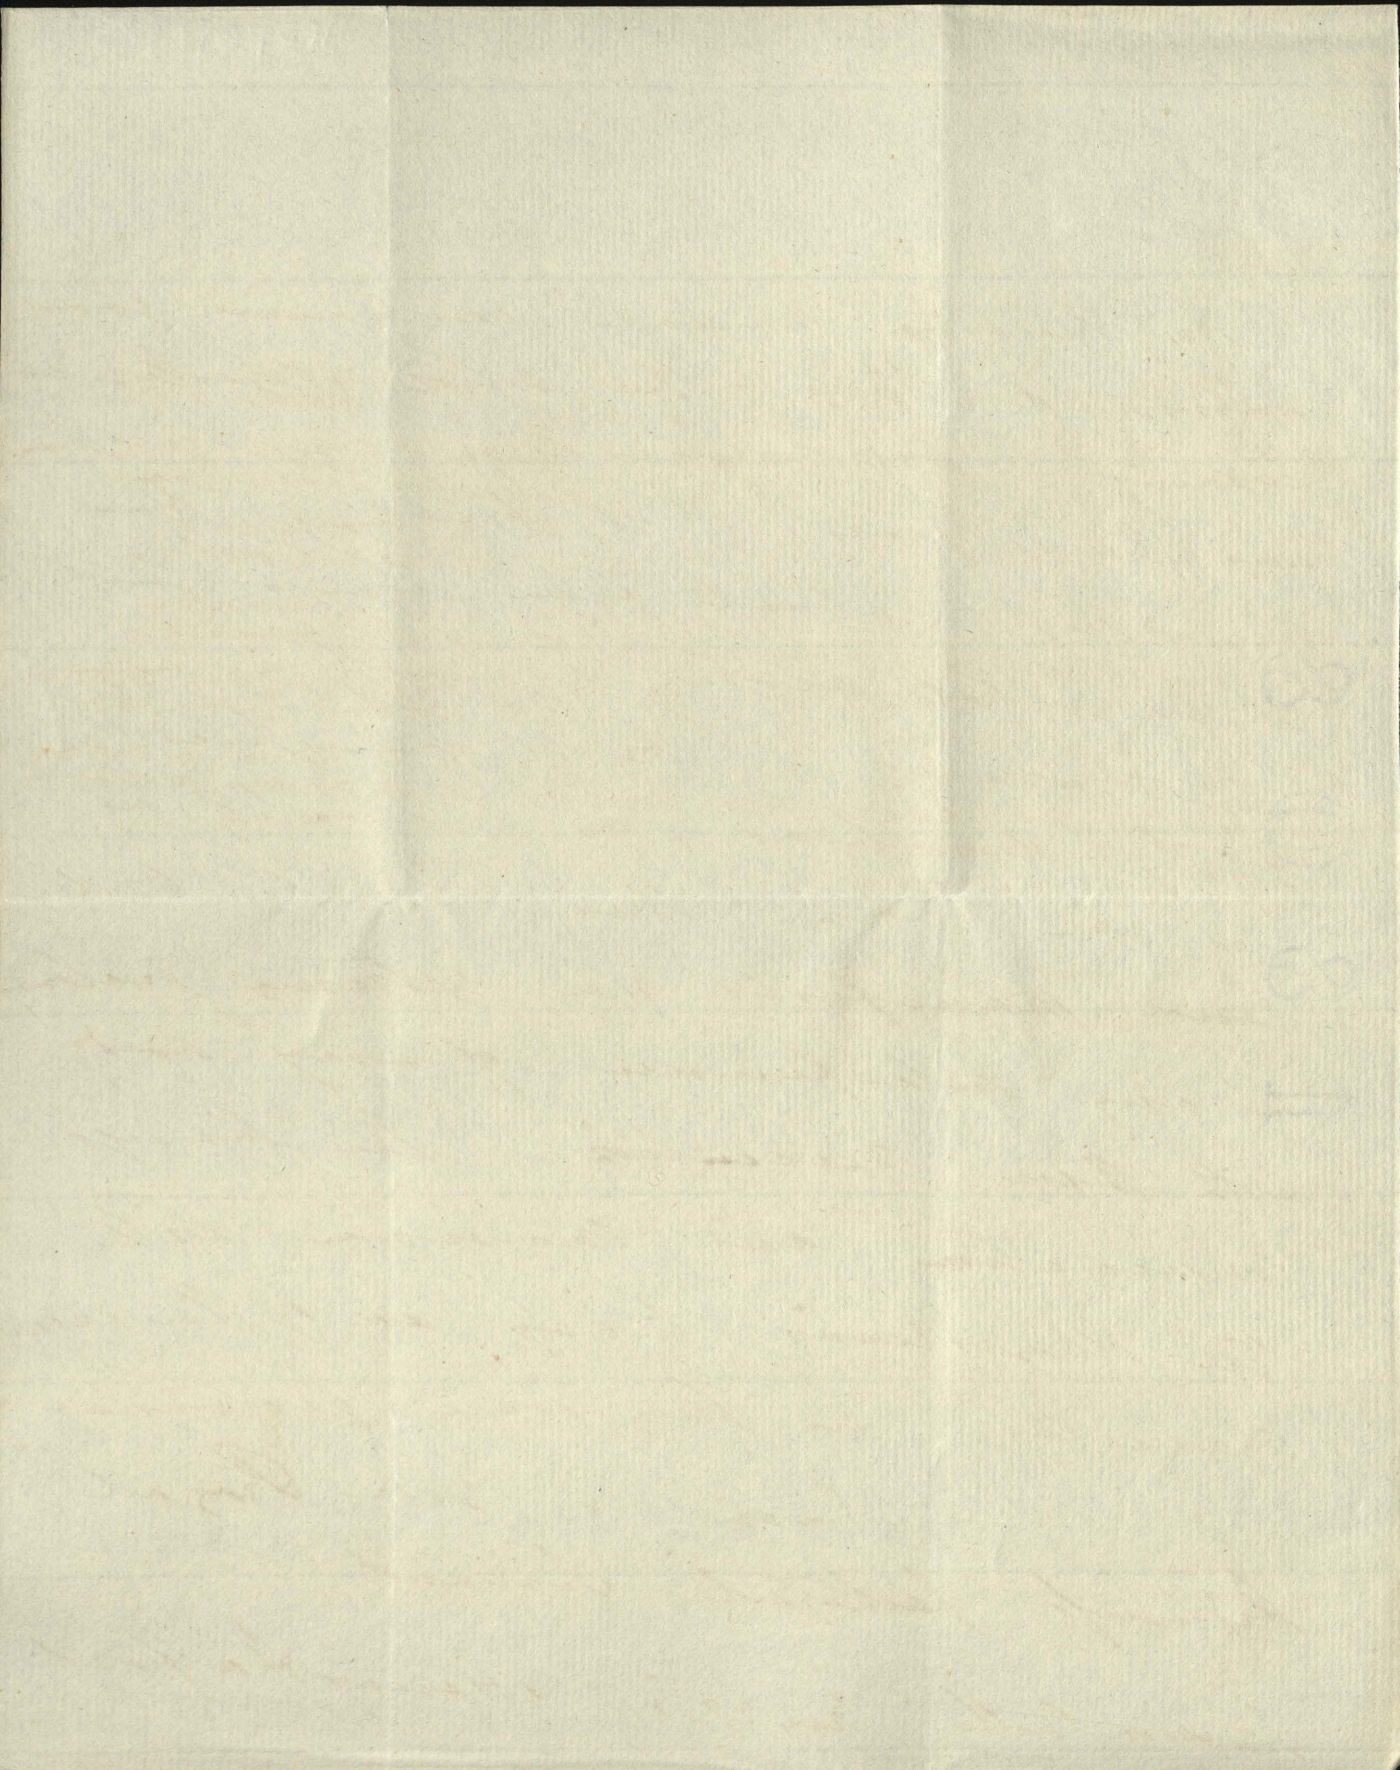

MEG 16/2/85

Sir

His Majesty's Maunc continued good-humoured thro' the whole of yesterday evening - His conversation was interesting and the subjects of it trifling. He then slept about five hours last night - but arose as early as usual this morning - He is occupied in giving directions as privately as possible about this Female Order and manifests an extreme jealousy at any interference of any body with their execution. The Muziji conversation and manner with the Physicians today are of the same character as they were yesterday.

I am, Sir, your Royal Highness's faithful Servant

Windsor Castle - May 27. 1811. Henry Hallford

MSD 16/2/86

Dr Hudson has the honor to inform His Royal Highness The Prince Regent that His Majesty appeared yesterday to be kind & good humoured; but his conversation was generally hurried and desultory. He slept about five hours in the night, and seems rather in a more favorable state this morning -

Windsor Castle

28 May 1821

[Faint, illegible handwriting, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

May 24. 1811

MED 116/2/87

Sir

I learn that the King passed a bad day yesterday - being under great excitement frequently - and talking almost incessantly - So far as I have had an opportunity of observing His Majesty since my arrival at Windsor this morning, the same state continues - but perhaps in a rather less degree.
It may be mentioned with propriety perhaps, that His Majesty having learned that one of the objects of the full meeting of the Physicians this day, (an extraordinary circumstance, was to answer a question proposed by the Queen's Council, whether any change of air or of residence might contribute to the King's more speedy recovery, declared with much energy and repeated that nothing but main force should remove them from Windsor at present - and that His Majesty gave good reasons for this determination - by adding that it was important to His comfort to be able to find His way about His apartments, which He could not do at New or any where else.

I will take care to inform you Royal Highness of the arrangements which may be determined upon at the meeting of the Queen's Council to day. I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness

faithful servant

Henry Halford

th
May 29. 1811.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper]

2<sup>d</sup>. June 11 o'clock - Wed<sup>d</sup> 12/188

night.

9 May 29

(cf. America's last King Sn. H. H.'s letter of same date)

S<sup>r</sup>

I did not leave Windsor until halfpast 8 o'clock this evening - It has been a most interesting day - The Queen's Council has sanctioned every measure which was recommended to it by the Physician - and drew up a firm and strong resolution which was ~~made~~ to His Majesty by the A. B. J.
Hauterbury in the presence of all the rest of the Council and all the Doctors.
His Majesty heard it with a great deal of dignity, tho

180
He manifested some impatience before it was all gone through.
The King detained me half an hour afterwards - and certainly did not spare the Members of the Council - I hope and trust this measure will have a good effect. It seems to me much more promising than if it had been heard with apathy.

In the rest we have autho-rity to use any means of control; (if control unhappi-ly become necessary) but His Majesty is still attended by His own Pages only.

I left the Queen and Princes very low and in tears - so that I hope
your Royal Highness's visit on Monday will be a comfort to Her Majesty and the Royal Family - but I believe it will be better that your Royal Highness do not see the King - His Majesty's intercourse with the Queen and Princes is suspended for a few days.

I am, Sir, with the highest
respect, your Royal Highness's
faithful servant
Henry Hatfield

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent that his Majesty's Interview with the Council has produced a great deal of irritation and anger which he has expressed most fully against all the Members of which it is compos'd — His Majesty however slept nearly four hours — This morning his Majesty's conversation has been directed to the same subject and with the same emotion of anger — His Majesty is also said to have occasionally referred to Weymouth and the common subject of his delusion —

Windsor Castle
May 30 — 1811

MED/16/2/90

31 May

Sir

Your Royal Highness will have learnt by the Princess Mary's letter addressed to your Royal Highness all that has passed since Dr Wallis returned - I have been with the Queen who condescended to explain to me what Her Majesty had thought it proper to write to the Council in consequence of the steps it had taken, and who was so obliging as to repeat to me what Her Majesty had stated more particularly in reference to myself and Dr Baillie - That a system of control is necessary, and indeed the ~~only~~ measure calculated to arrest the destructive course which His Majesty's disorder is taking, appears clear to the Queen - as it has done to myself - Her Majesty is reconciled to it therefore provided it may be conducted in the most gentle manner possible - and that the ordinary Physicians have every necessary <sup>superintendance &</sup> reception room, and that <sup>watch</sup> over the conduct of the attendants, which will be a security for their good and humane conduct. I learn with great satisfaction that Her Majesty has particularly expressed Her commands to the Council, that it should direct the Physicians to sit up at night as before -

I have just been into the King's room but without making myself known - I have not conversed with His Majesty therefore - but had the comfort of seeing the King composed and quiet - He was speaking in German & Kromm - and had been playing the flute - The day, I learn, on the whole has been a calm one, and that the introduction of the men at 9 o'clock this morning produced less irritation than might have been expected, tho' a temporary excitement and anger.

I will write more particularly tomorrow morning when I shall have had the advantage of observing His Majesty in his conversation with us -

I cannot help adding that I saw great marks of anxiety and distress in the countenance of the Queen and all the Princesses when I went humbly to inquire after Her Majesty on my arrival - God knows this second occasion of the necessity of staying about the King's person at that late period of Her Majesty's illness, and all the circumstances which have occurred in the course of this week have been sufficient to call forth the most painful feelings - I trust however that a consciousness of having been guided in Her Majesty's conduct by one motive only, that of doing all the Queen could in the most tender manner to contribute to the King's comfort and recovery will ~~support~~ <sup>uphold</sup> Her Majesty in her severe trial - and that the poor Princesses will take consolation from the sense of the support which they give their Parent, in this dreadful hour of Her affliction -

For yourself, Sir, it is impossible to add an expression of comfort to that internal satisfaction you

MED/16/2/90

Royal Assurances must feel in having made your Public as well as your private conduct entirely subservient to the King's wishes and his happiness -

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Assurances' faithful servant

Henry St John

12 o'clock - Friday evening -

Col: Taylor does not write anything in this enclosure because he has not seen the King's order yesterday at one o'clock

Faint, illegible text visible on the right edge of the paper, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side.

May 31. 1811 MED/16/2/91

Dr. Robt Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that The King continued through the whole of yesterday in so irritable a state, and talked so incessantly to His Pages, that it was judged expedient to remove them from their attendance upon His Majesty and to place Strangers, for a time, about His Majesty's person. This measure was carried into effect this morning, and it is satisfactory to be able to state to The Prince Regent that it was productive of less irritation than might naturally have been expected from it. It is probable that His Majesty, from the occurrences of the last few days, had so far prepared His mind for it that the proposal was not altogether a matter of surprise to Him. After some few expressions of displeasure, His Majesty acceded to it with apparently little reluctance, and has remained in a state of composure from that time.

Windsor Castle

May 31. 1811.