

June 1. 1811

MED | 16 | 2 | 92

Sir

His Majesty has passed a better night than we expected. He would, considering that the Strangers were in His room. The King slept about five hours and did not rise this morning till a quarter before seven. At our visit just now we found the King tho' more temperate in His appearance, still apparently deeply incensed with the Lucie's Council, individually and generally. - Yet we think that the fury of the storm has abated, and have less reason to apprehend any further increase of Fever at present. In short the check has been a salutary one - God knows! it was become urgently necessary - and the only ~~ground~~ on which a rational expectation of the Prince's recovery can be built, is that firm and steady but mild control on which we are now acting.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's
Dutiful Servant

Henry Hatford.

In name of the Principal of the new attendants is Pennington - a very respectable looking person - He is the superintendant of Hubert's House

Windsor Castle - June 1st 1811.

in which
The Bulletin intended to be issued tomorrow is

His Majesty has had some fresh accession of His disorder, but it does not appear to be increasing.

Signed

Henry Hallford

M. Backli

W. Heberden

R. Willis.

Strong

June 3. 1811

MED 16/2/93

Sir,

That variability which has been so striking a feature in the King's state lately - appears to be subsiding gradually - and His Majesty is recovering a little more control over Himself. The King slept about four hours last night - and His extremely sensitive and quick as to nerves His Majesty was less excited during our stay with Him than He has been lately.

His Majesty spoke in very kind terms of your Royal Highness's attention in having defended the City for a week - remarking that, if things went on now as prosperously as they promised to do, there could be no reason why it should not be given next week. but He added, the Prince of Wales has shown equal good feeling and attention to me.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's

Dutiful Servant

Henry Balfour

June 3. 1811

Windsor Castle

Sir,

I have the honor to acquaint Your Royal Highness, that His Majesty goes on upon the whole in a manner that is satisfactory to us. The irritation and anger, which he manifested so lately, appears to have subsided; and his constitution is unimpaired by the recent shock. If His Majesty is rather more elevated in his manner this morning, it is probably owing to the circumstance of the day itself. He slept last night only four hours & a quarter, and was in a state that indicated a weakness of nerves this morning. I have the satisfaction to add that the swelling of the legs has very much gone down since I had last the honor of being with The King, and that there is great reason to expect the best effects from the state of quiet in which he is now kept. I have the honor to be

Sir, Your Royal Highness's
most obedient

and humble servant

W. Keble

Windsor Castle

4 June 1822

[Faint, illegible handwriting on lined paper, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side.]

Dr Bevillic has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that the irritation of his Majesty has in a great measure subsided —

His Majesty slept last night five hours, and the swelling of his legs is every day a little subsiding, so that they are less swelled than they have been for several weeks — His Majesty's conversation was this morning somewhat too trifling and he is reported to have yester day made a slight reference to his usual error —

Windsor Castle

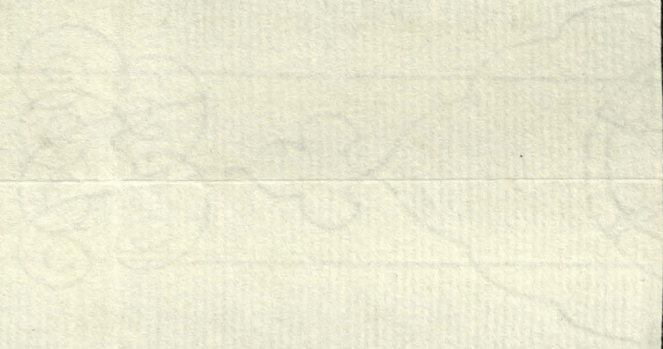

June 5—1811

PRINTED BY
GODFREY & CO
LONDON

MED/16/2/96

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-
-ing the Prince-Regent, that his Ma-jesty pass'd yesterday without appa-rent irritation - In the Evening He was a little too talkative, but was in good humour - It is difficult to say whether in the course of the last 24 hours there has been a delusion or not, as what has been reported is so slight as to render it doubtful - His Majesty slept only four hours last night, but was silent while awake and He rose a little before seven this morn-ing - His Majesty's conversation this morning was partly trifling, and partly as good as during the best period of his indisposition -

Windsor Castle
June 6 - 1811

June 7. 1811

MEG | 16 | 2 | 97

Dr. Robt. Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that the thing passed yesterday as satisfactorily as any day since the commencement of His Majesty's indisposition. The King's conversation was good, and his conduct free from any appearance of levity. For a few hours in the afternoon there were occasionally some marks of impatience exhibited, but these were slight and transient. His Majesty retired to bed at ten o'clock and slept six hours. His Majesty's conversation this morning has betrayed nothing different from yesterday, but his spirits are rather more elevated and his pulse is some:

= what quickened.

Windsor Castle

June 7. 1811.

June 8. 1811

MED | 16 | 2 | 98

Sir

I find that the whole of the last week has been pass'd by His Majesty in a more tranquil and compos'd manner than any of the last three weeks. As this has been occasion'd so obviously by the greater degree of restraint under which the King has liv'd, it does not admit of our interfering with any propriety or safety that His Majesty's malady has declined proportionally; but we are justify'd in flattering ourselves that the exclusion from all occasions of excitement and a system of steady prudent control may lead to that improvement which we are all so anxious to writing - Some reference has been noticed to His Majesty's favorite errors - but not in any considerable degree, and not frequently.

I am Sir, with the highest respect
Your Royal Highness
Faithful Servant

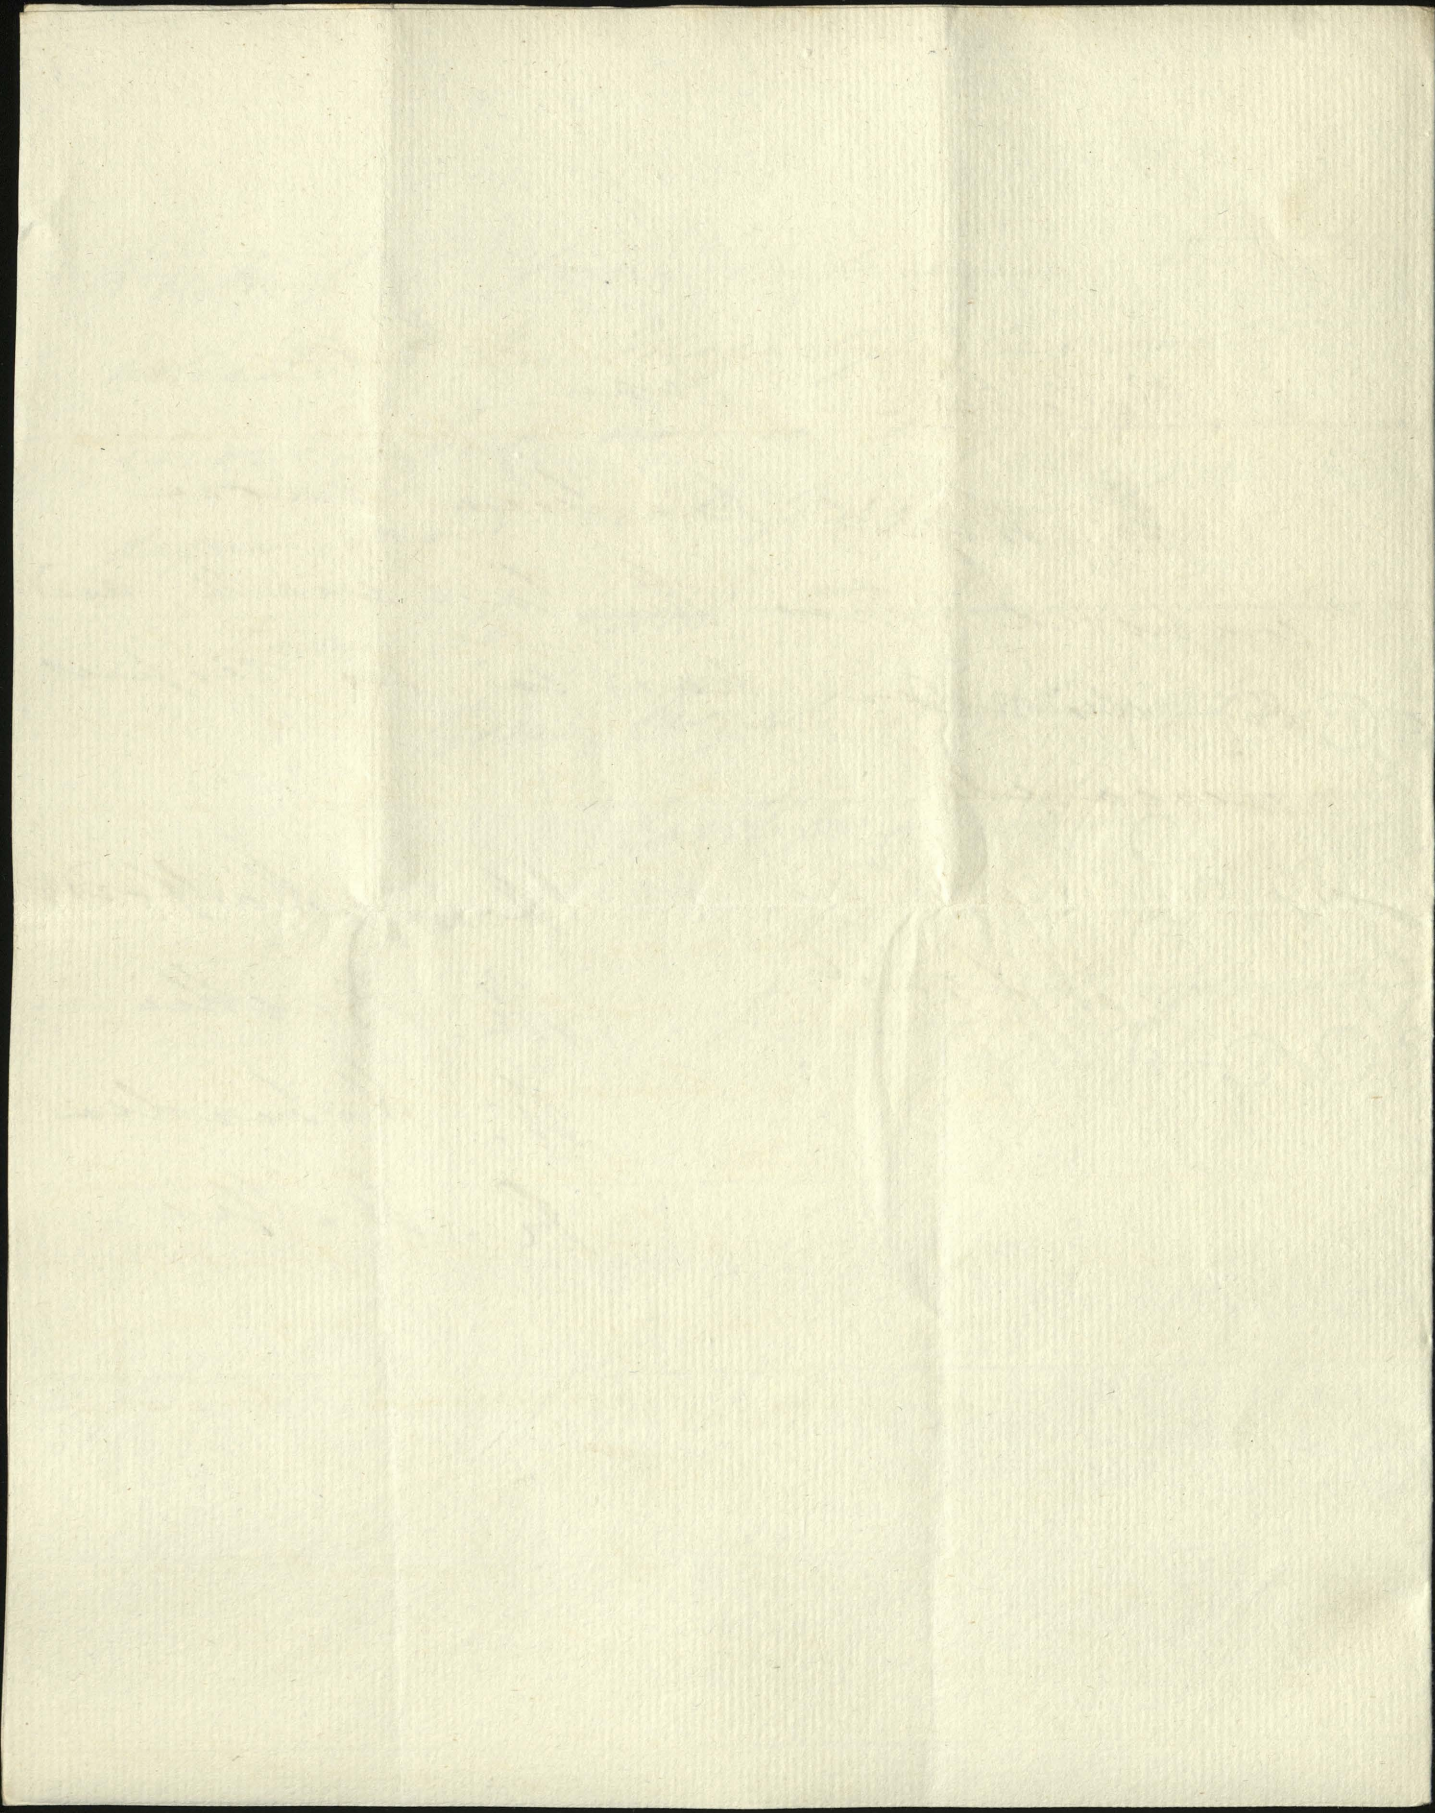

Henry Holford.

Bulletin - June 8th 1811.

His Majesty has been more composed than the last week, and His disorder has in no respect increased.

Signed

Henry Kalford
M. Beattie
W. Koberster
G. Willis.

MED 16/2/99
June 9 1811

Sir,

There does not appear to have been any material variation in the King's symptoms since I had the honor of reporting them to your Royal Highness yesterday - The system of exclusion by preventing every source of irritation occasions naturally a more uniform even tenor in the King's state.

His Majesty slept three hours and a half - and His Catharine this morning alone entertained several to make a better choice of the subjects of His Majesty's conversation than His Majesty has done lately.

The King had learnt from one of the attendants that the Princess Charlotte was at the Montem - and expressed a degree of satisfaction at Her Royal Highness being at Windsor - His Majesty asked me with some earnestness if I had seen the Princif - how the Royal Highness looked - and some other interesting questions - adding with considerable pleasure that he was sure the Princif Mary would take good care of the Royal Highness.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness's
Faithful Servant

Henry Hatford

Windsor Castle - June 9th 1811

June 10. 1811 MED | 16 | 2 | 100

Sir

His Majesty passed the whole of yesterday in a very composed manner. He has had less sleep than usual in the course of the last three nights - and yet, excepting that nervousness which is marked by the adjustment of his bed clothes, appears to suffer nothing from the privation. His Majesty's manner and conversation today are not exceptional. Tho' we may acknowledge that we discern a little more hurry than yesterday - I do not find that the King has manifested any marked reference to his familiar errors within the last two days.

I am Sir with the highest respect
Your Royal Highness's faithful
servant
Henry Hallford

Sir,

I understand that His Majesty did not pass the last day in quite so composed and tranquil a manner, as he had done the day preceding; yet compared with almost any other day it was a good one. His Majesty slept about four hours and an half in the night; and this morning appears particularly well. Dr Willis and myself were in conversation with His Majesty for nearly three quarters of an hour, and were pleased with hearing him talk on several different subjects, all of them proper ones, and with observations that at once mark'd His Majesty's attention, and judgment, and kindness of heart.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your Royal Highnesses

Most Obedient

and Humble Servants

Windsor

11 June 1821

W. Herberden

[Faint, illegible handwriting on lined paper]

Sir,

Your Royal Highness will be gratified to receive a very favorable account of His Majesty's progress under his present treatment. The last day was pass'd without any excitement, and was particularly distinguished by a continued attention to reading, which we had not before witness'd. His Majesty slept five hours in the night; and appears in his manner and general health to maintain the advantage he has evidently gain'd in the last ten days; though, compar'd with yesterday, his conversation was more chequer'd with levity during our visit this morning -

I have the honor to be
 Sir, Your Royal Highness's
 most obedient
 and humble servant

Windsor Castle

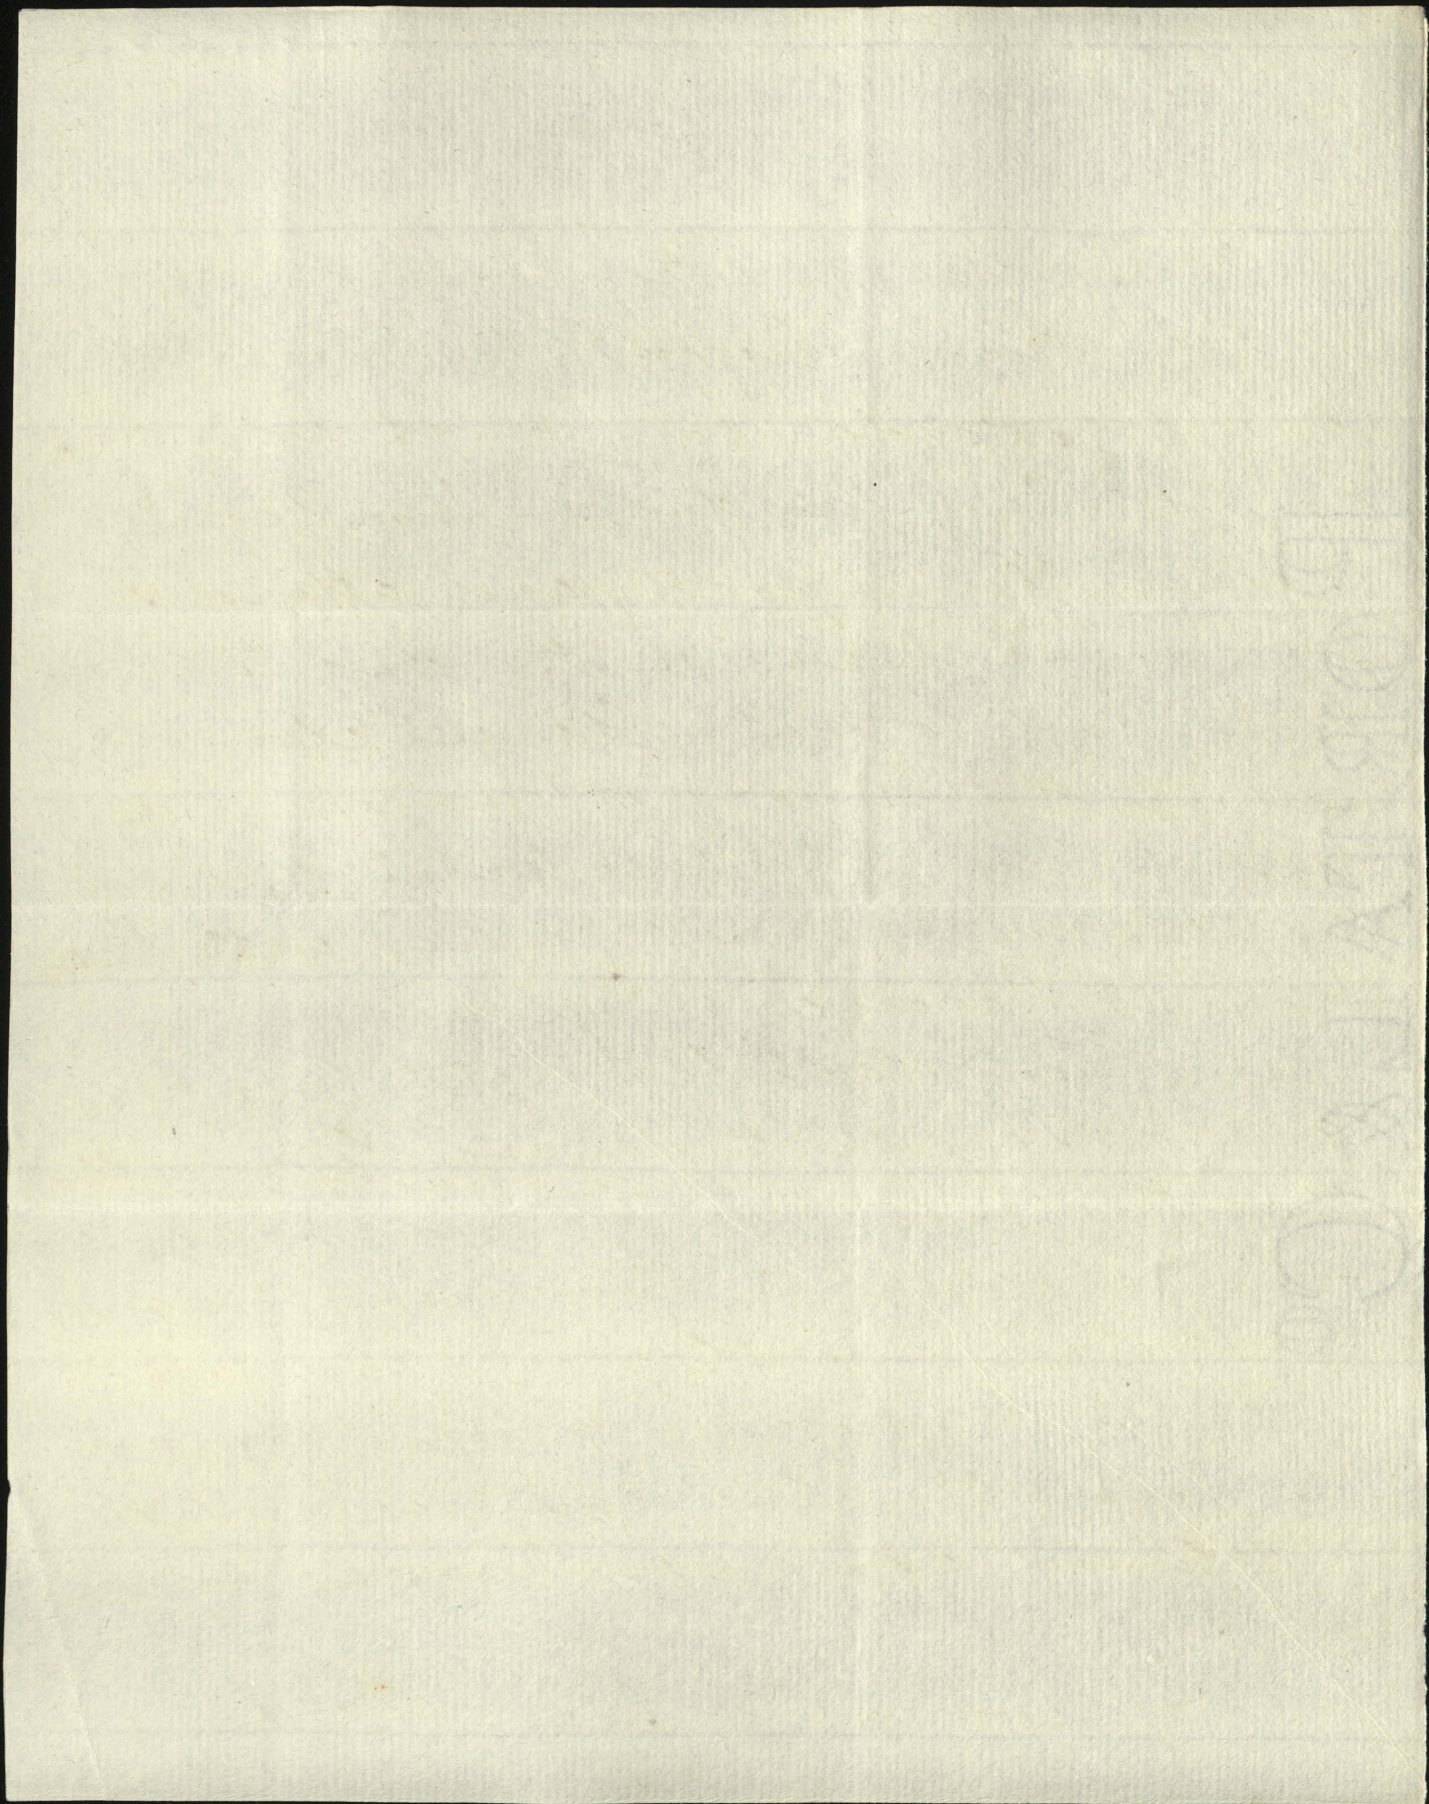

12 June 1811

W. Herberden

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-
 -ing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty improv'd yesterday very much as he has done the last few days - His Majesty is generally compos'd, and attends for several hours in the day to a Book being read to him - He has already had an old History of Windsor in Quarts read to him which is finish'd, and His attention is now occupied with Baskingormant Baronage of England -

His Majesty slept last night four hours, and his Legs are this morning less swelled than they have been for many weeks
 - His Conversation this morning was partly trifling, partly good, and mix'd with some expressions of anger against the Council - There has been no reference to delusion, as far as is known, for some days -

Windsor Castle June 13 - 1811

June 14 1811

Dr Robt Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince-Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that His Majesty passed yesterday in the same state of calmness and composure, in which He passed the several preceding days. His Majesty's attention to reading continued also unabated. It is highly gratifying to observe that His Majesty appears to be truly sensible of the nature of His situation, and that He exerts Himself to the utmost to correct the occasional aberrations of His mind. It is evident, however, at the same time that His Majesty still harbours some displeasure against the members of The Queen's Council.

His Majesty slept five hours last night and appears, in all respects, as well as He was yesterday.

Windsor Castle

June 14. 1811.

June 15. 1811

MED/16/2/105

Sir

The same state of quietude which has been reported to your Royal Highness so constantly lately prevails with His Majesty still; and it is remarkable that the King attends uninterruptedly, & ceases when He sleeps, to a book read to Him. That His Majesty is very thoughtful is obvious - but we can only conjecture what may be passing in His mind. He has not manifested any palpable reference to His delusions for many days past, nor has the King's conversation been upon plans of building, or upon intended journeys in the manner it used to be some time since - but when we make this remark we should apure your Royal Highness that we cannot presume to infer that His Majesty's disease does not exist tho' the indications of it are suppressed and less palpable. Of this we are all certain that the impression made by the solemn representation of the Queen's Council a fortnight since, followed by the substitution of His Majesty's present attendants in place of His Pages has caused the King to a command of Himself which cannot fail to contribute to good.

I am Sir, with the highest respect your Royal Highness; faithful serv^t
Henry Halford

Bulletin - June 15. 1871.

His Majesty appears to have been a little better this week than the week preceding.

Signed.

Henry Hallford

M. Baskin

W. Reberden

P. Willis -

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side.]

June 17. 1811

MED | 1612 | 106

Sir

That state of composure which I had the satisfaction of reporting to your Royal Highness yesterday continued throughout the evening - and His Majesty remained not only quiet but silent - I am sorry to add that the King has not slept more than an hour and a half last night - and that His Majesty manifested His usual nervousness by adjusting the bed-clothes for a great length of time.
At our interviews this morning however we do not discover any ill effects from this privation of sleep - nor is there any thing in His Majesty's conversation at all exceptional.

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness's

Obedient Servant

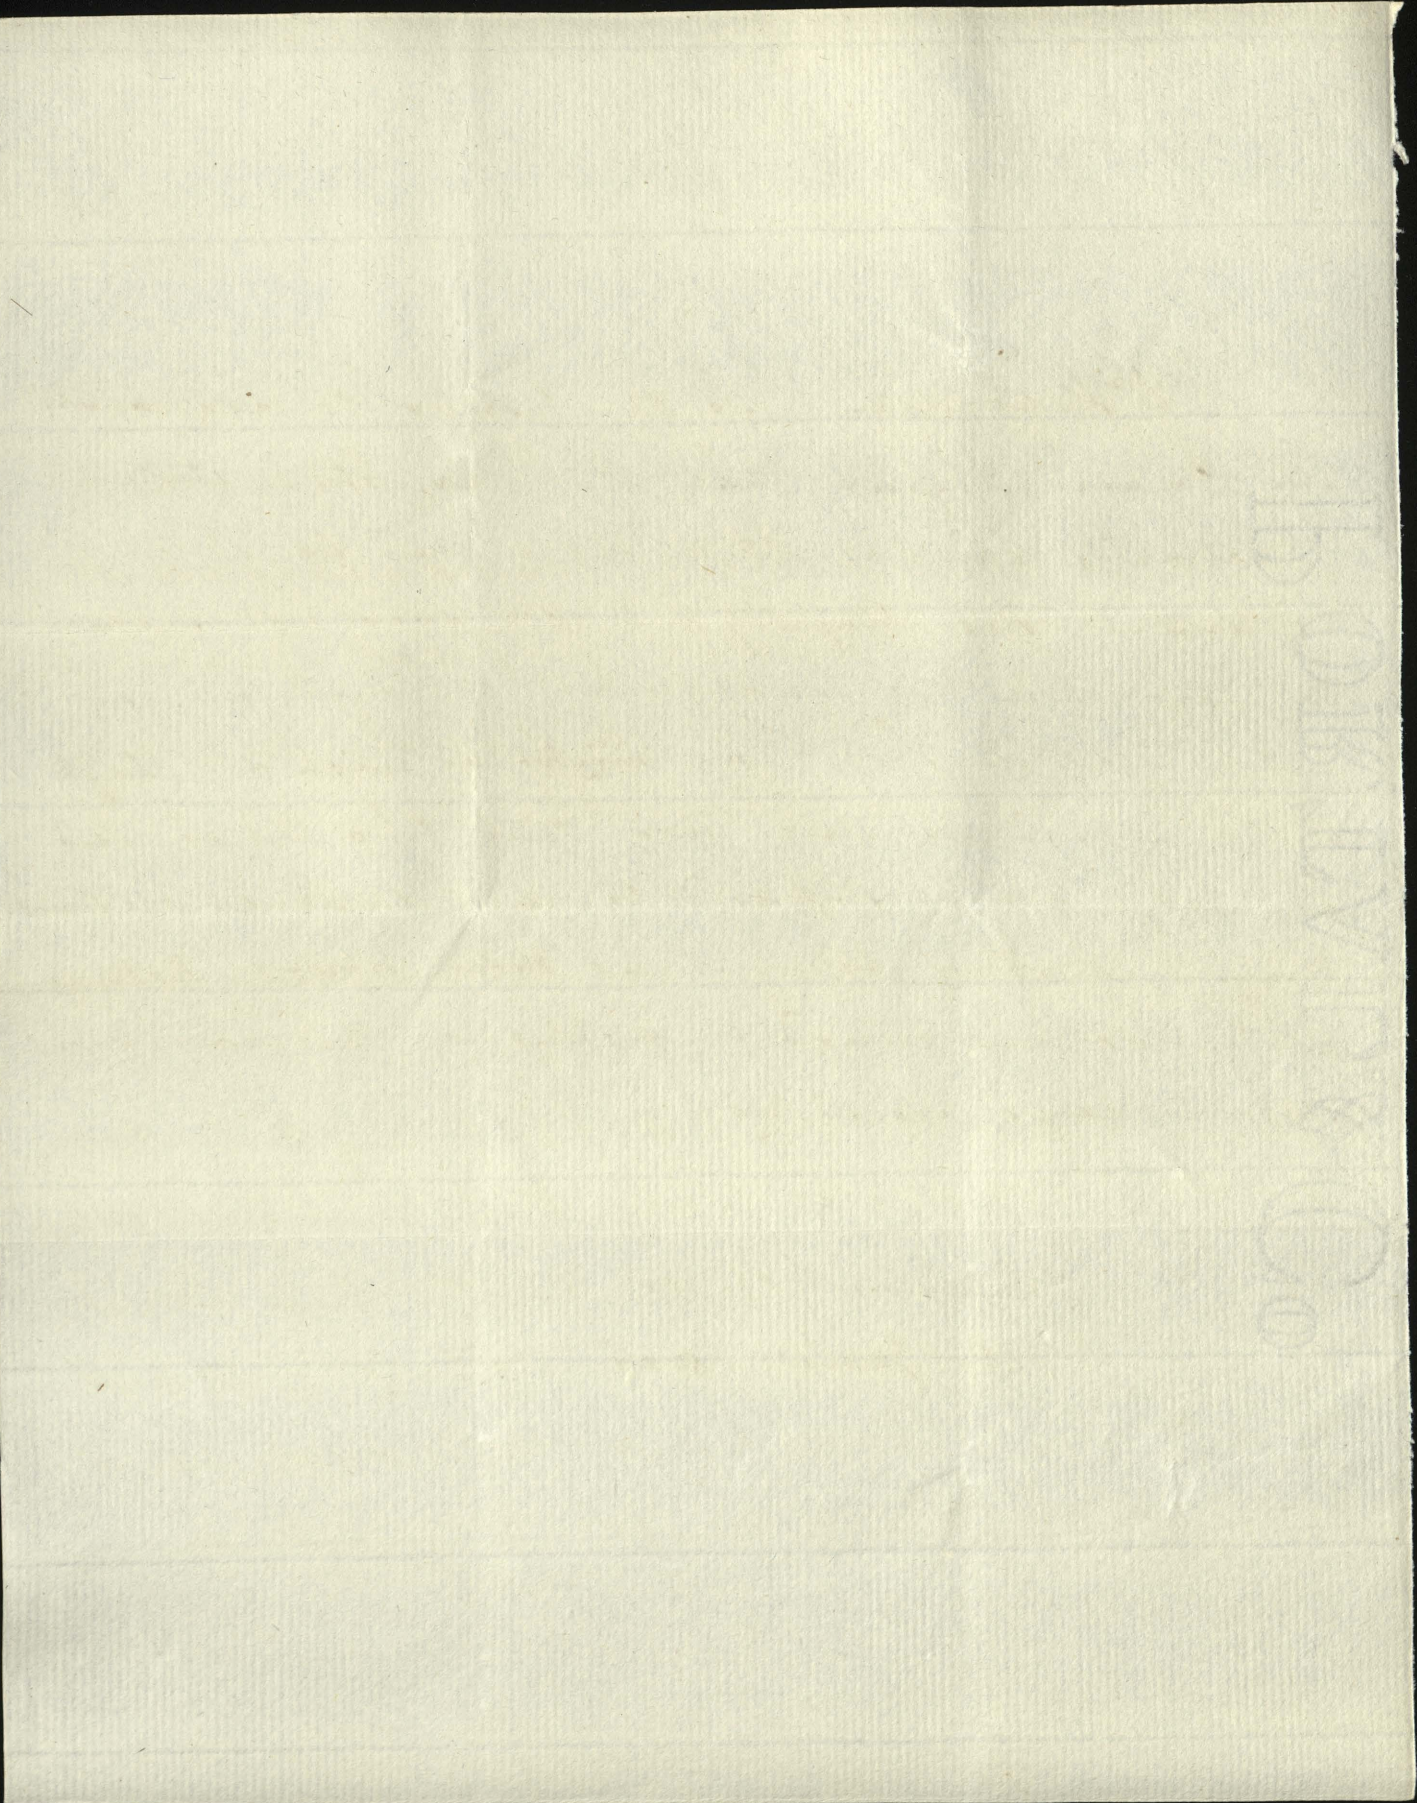

Henry Haller

June 17th 1811

MED 16/2/1062

D^r Herberden has the honor to acquaint The Prince Regent that His Majesty's state of calmness, and his attention to reading still continue. His Majesty's health does not seem to suffer from his confinement, although he has lately got less sleep, than might be wish'd. Last night he did not sleep more than two hours and an half, but is supposed to have slept at different times yesterday as much as three hours. Nothing particular has occur'd to distinguish this day from several days preceding -

Windsor Castle
10 June 1811

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent that his Majesty passed yesterday as he has done a good many days past - His Majesty is composed, and spends a considerable part of the day in attending to what is read to Him -

His Majesty slept last night two hours and a quarter - This morning His conversation with his medical attendants was good, and there has been no delusion, as far as is known, for a good many days -

Windsor Castle
June 19 - 1871

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent, that his Majesty passed yesterday as usual in a very tranquil manner - He had the proceedings in the Berkeley Cause read to him on which He made occasionally very good remarks - At times He appear'd thoughtful, and was silent.

Last night His Majesty only slept two hours, but occasionally He slept for a short time during yesterday -

This Morning His Majesty's conversation has been as good as usual, and there has been no delusion, as far as is known -

Windsor Castle

June 20 - 1811

June 21. 1811

MED/16/2/109

Dr. Robt Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that the same state of calmness and composure, which has lately, with so much satisfaction, been reported to His Royal Highness, continued through the whole of yesterday. In the afternoon The King bathed in a warm bath, and Mr Batt, His Majesty's Page, was permitted to attend upon His Majesty in the Bath room: His Majesty having previously given an assurance that He was sensible of the necessity of controlling Himself, and that He had determined to do so upon all occasions. The Prince Regent will be gratified to learn that no apparent excitement was produced by this indulgence.

The King slept only two hours last right, but His Majesty's manner and conversation this morning are unexcept-ionable.

Windsor Castle

June 21. 1811.

June 22. 1811

MED/16/2/110

Sir

I find His Majesty on my return to Windsor much in the same state in which His Majesty appeared to be on Monday last. The King has passed His days generally in a very composed and quiet manner - but the portion of sleep which He has obtained every night has been far too little. The King slept last night two hours and a half and was engaged for a considerable time this morning in adjusting His bed clothes - At our interview this morning the King's conversation was not exceptionable - but His manner somewhat sharp, and rather hurried. I am, Sir, with

With highest respect, your Royal Highness faithful servant

Henry Hatford

Windsor Castle -

June 22. 1871. -

Bulletin

His Majesty continues as well as he was last week.

signed

Henry Balfour

M. B. B. B.

W. B. B. B.

J. B. B. B. -

June 24. 1811

MSD/16/2/111

Sir

There was nothing in His Majesty's circumstances yesterday to distinguish the day from several which preceded it - The King appeared more composed, perhaps, than usual, and slept frequently - but this has not been the case in the course of the night - as I find His Majesty has not had more than an hour and a half sleep - and that He has been engaged almost incessantly in arranging His bed clothes - His Majesty has not referred again to His familiar error, nor shown perhaps any other decisive symptom of His peculiar complaint - but He is more prone to excitement to day, and His conversation with us was not held in His Majesty's natural good tempered manner.

I am, Sir, with the highest respect, your Royal Highness
faithful servant

Henry Hatford.

Jan 24. 1811.

Windsor Castle

Windsor Castle June 25th

Sir,

I have the honor to inform Your Royal Highness that His Majesty pass'd a better day yesterday, than he had done for some days preceding, having lost that little tendency to fretfulness and dissatisfaction, which came on about Friday last. He went twice upon the Terrace in the course of the day, and got nearly five hours sleep in the night. His Majesty appears this morning to be in cheerful spirits, but his conversation has been good & sensible.

I have the honor to be
 Sir, Your Royal Highness's
 most obedient
 and humble servant

W. Herbert

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent that His Majesty passed yesterday a particularly tranquil day, and was not excited by his walk on the Terrace, altho this indulgence be still new to him — His Majesty slept last night three hours & a half — This morning His conversation was unexceptionable as to matter, but His Manner was a little too frivolous and familiar —

Windsor Castle
June 26 — 1811

[Faint, illegible handwriting in cursive script, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

TLED / 16 / 2 / 1124

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-
-ing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty pass'd the whole of yesterday in a tranquil manner — He walk'd in the course of the day three times on the Terrace with Dr Willis, without any excitement being produced by it — While in the House His Majesty partly amused himself with his Piano Forte, and partly with Boswell's life of Johnson and the News Papers, which were read to him — In the evening His Majesty went into the warm Bath, and slept with very little interruption in the night for six hours & a half — This morning His Majesty looks well, and his conversation is as good as usual —

Windsor Castle

June 27 - 1811

June 28. 1811

MSO 16/2/115

Dr. Robt. Willis has the honour of presenting his humble duty to The Prince Regent and of acquainting His Royal Highness that the King continued in a very tranquil state through the whole of yesterday. His Majesty's conversation, for the most part, was unexceptionable, but His manner was occasionally more trifling than it had been during the two or three preceding days.

His Majesty was three times upon the terrace yesterday without shewing any hurry or elevation of spirits.

His Majesty slept about four hours in the course of the night: Towards the morning His Majesty was more disposed than he has lately been to adjust the bedclothes.

This morning His Majesty is composed and exhibits nothing peculiar either in manner or conversation.

Windsor Castle

June 28. 1811.

June 29. 1811

MEO/16/2/116

Sir

I cannot have the comfort of stating to your Royal Highness that our con-versation with His Majesty this morn-ing admits of a safe inference that the King has made a progress since I left Windsor on Monday.
The subjects on which His Majesty chose to speak today, and His manner of talking indicated a little more excitement than has been noticed frequently, or a more careful enquiry into all the circumstances of the week, it appears, I think, and is generally admitted that there is no material difference in the things' state.

I am, Sir, with the highest respects
your Royal Highness's faithful
servant

Henry Halford

th
June 29: 1811.

Windsor Castle

I cannot send your Royal Highness the bulletin intended to be issued, as it is not yet settled - but it agreed upon generally that it shall express, that the thing is must be same.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper]