My dear Brother,

Ever more I beg leave to trouble you on the subject of my station; if it is not too late let me intreat you to ask for my having the chancell: should the King not give me a larger allowance, I shall in England be able to live on my income, and if you think it will aid the business, say that on the homestead I wish for more than three thousand a year: another point that if granted I am very ready to begin that station for three years and during that time I will not trouble the King, which in these circumstances is six and twenty years of age a year longer than he himself has meant to employ me: I will Let me observe what is a fact, namely that Captain Dodd is is just appointed to the Plymouth station, is a worthy, sensible man incapable of being in the Chamberlain's office at -ready hand: apply, by all means, my dear brother, and let me know there is as soon as possible about. I am sure do not forget the home station. I have many reasons prefer and let me pursue all your endeavours to succeed.

Give my best compliments to Frederick and tell him yesterday received his letter and will answer him in a day or two; and ever believe me,

Your most affectionate Brother, and Friend,

J. J. J.
